THE DEVIL UNCHAINED!

The nethermost hell must have spewed out its vilest fiend; the toughest devil of all the damned that are roasting in purgatorial fires, must have revisited earth; nay, the prince of Pandemonium himself must be unchained; for no human heart could conceive so malignant, so wicked and so diabolical a trick as that attempted to be paimed off upon the public in a telegram sent from this place, the tenor of which is that Mr. Meyers, the Democratic candidate for Senator, in a late speech eulogized J. Wilkes Booth. The miserable, unanointed, unwashed scoundrel who sent that telegram dares not face Mr. Meyers and acknowledge its authorship. He is a liar, a villain and a coward! His stabs in the dark are those of an assassin whose heart is blacker than that of Booth, but unlike Booth's, his blows, though nerved with a malicious and deadly intent, are perfeetly harmless and only recoil upon those whom he would serve. Avaunt, thou cowardly devil! "Get thee back into the tempest, and the Night's Plutonian shore!" In other words, go to the Devil who has a mortgage upon you for a hundred times the value of your petty three cent soul!

A CALCULATION.

The Radical papers of this Congres sional district have been flattering their readers with calculations on the vote of the district, which are about as near the truth as Munchausen's story about climbing to the moon on a bean-stalk. Now, we will give some figures:

We Can Do It Again.

In 1864, Bedford county gave McClellan 631 majority. She can do it again, if her full Democratic vote be polled. There are 3,000 Democratic voters in Bedford county. Let them all be got did say? Letter from a late "Republican."

The following extracts are from a letter of Dr. J. Sigafoos, brother of Rev. Geo. Sigafoos, formerly of this place, who has been a life-long "Republican" and who was a surgeon in the army during the war. Read it:

West Milton, Miami co., O. Sept. 23, 1866. DEAR BROTHER:—I am determined now to leave here, for the Radical Disunionists are getting so tyrannical that a man's life is not safe if he will not agree to let them traduce the character of the best men in the land and say nothing. In the last few weeks they have been busy calling President Johnson a "traitor." A member of Congress said here in a speech, "Johnson, the old traitor, would and should by his vote, be tried for treason and driven from his seat." When they try this game, you will hear of your brother James going to the "wars again." I helped to put down the Southern rebellion and will go again to put down the Northern traitors, if they do not cease their usurpation. If I were President Johnson, Congress should not legislate another day, unless when they meet again, the clerk of the House calls the roll of all the States. There is no time for Union men to while away. We had better "take the bull by the horns" the Court of QuarterSessions has some ballot-box in the coming election, we business with them. Stick a pin right are safe. Their treason would be so glaring, if they would attempt, after a defeat at the polls, to overthrow the government, that they could muster but a small force to back them. Many of the soldiers are leaving their sinking ship. How a Union soldier can support such a motley crew is more than I can divine. Fred. Douglass, Ben Butler Anna Dickinson, Randolph (darkey) and Theo. DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT, ON THE RIGHT OF SO-CALLED DESERTERS TO VOTE!

Election Officers, Read!

The following is the opinion of the Supreme Court in regard to the right of so-called "deserters" to vote. It declares the Act of Congress void and of course the act of the Legislature based upon the void Act of Congress is also void. A MAN MUST FIRST BE TRIED, CONVICTED AND SEN-TENCED as a deserter before he can be deprived of his right to vote. So say the Supreme Court. Read for yourselves:

The act of 1806 provided for general courts martial, and made minute and careful regulations for their organization, for the conduct of their proceedings, and for the approval or disapproval of their sentences. Subsequent acts made some changes, but they have not restrained the jurisdiction or diminished the powers of such courts. It is to such a code of laws, forming a system devised for the punishment of desertion. that the twenty-first section of the of March 3, 1865, was added. It refers plainly to pre-existing laws. It has the single object of increasing the penalties, but it does not undertake to change or dispense with the machinery provided for punishing the crime. The common rules of construction demand that it be read as if it had been incorporated into former acts. And if it had been, if the act of 1806 and its supplements had pre-scribed that the penalty for desertion or failure to report within a designated time after notice or draft (which the act of 1865 declares desertion) should be punished, on conviction of the same with forfeiture of citizenship and death, or in lieu of the latter, such other punishment as by the sentence of a court martial may be inflicted, would any one contend that any portion of this pun-ishment could be inflicted without conviction and sentence? Assuredly not. And if not, so must the act of 1865 be construed now. It means that the forfeiture which it prescribes, like all other pen alties for desertion, must be adjudged to the convicted person after trial by a court martial and sentence approved. For the conviction and sentence of such a court there can be no substitute. They alone establish the guilt of the accused and fasten upon him the legal conse-quences. Such, we think, is the true meaning of the act, a construction that cannot be denied to it without losing sight of all the previous legislation repecting the same subject matter, no part f which does this act profess to alter It may be added that this construction is not only required by the univer-sally admitted rules of statutory inter-the accused a trial before sworn judges, a right to challenge, an opportunity of defense, the privilege of hearing the witnesses against him, and of calling witnesses in his behalf. It preserves to nim the common-law presumption of nnocence until he has been adjudged guilty, according to the forms of law It gives finality to a single trial. If tried by a court martial and acquitted, his inin irons, keeping company with Jeff cence can never again be called in question, and he can be made to ty years I have voted in opposition to no part of the penalties prescribed for the Democratic party, but now for the guilt. On the other hand, if a record of on viction by a lawful court be not a pre-equisite to suffering the penalty of the sake of the Union and for the sake of law, the act of Congress may work intolerable hardships. The accused will then be obliged to prove his innocence whenever the registry of the provest marshal is adduced against him. No decision of a board of election office: s will protect him against the pressity of renewing peace, I shall vote its ticket and hope him against the necessity of renewing his defense at every subsequent election, and each time with increased difficulty There is a large body of religionists, who are among our best citizens, and whom we respect very highly, whose who are spect very highly, whose were causes that prevented a return to creed is adverse to war, and to participation in battle. tober election in 1865, resulted in the conviction of Brown and Betts and the acquittal of Yeager, the Court having instructed the jury that they could not convict the latter under the evidence.

The facts of the case, as given in evidence on the trial, are about as follows: John Dayton, a man of foreign birth, presented himself at the window at the October election in 1865, offering his ballot in one hand and his naturalization paper and a receipt for taxes in the other. He was challenged by one of the Board as a deserter, as he had been absent from the township during one of the drafts. They refused to allow him to vote unless he would take an oath that he had not left the township to a-void the draft. Mr. Dayton refused to do this and his vote was rejected, Mr. Yeager protesting against the action of the Board and being over-ruled by his companions. Mr. Orvis assisted the District Attorney in the prosecution and Mr. McIllister conducted the defence. The jury were out but a short time when they returned with a verdict of guilty as to Brown and Betts and not guilty as to Yeager.

We hope the effect of this trial may be to prevent all such illegal attempts to deprive qualified voters of their rights

HOW THE TICKETS ARE TO BE VOTED.

Read this Carefully.

The Legislature, last winter, passed a law which changes the manner of voting. All State officers voted for will be voted on one slip, labeled "State;" all county officers and members of Congress, Senators, and members of the Legislature voted for, will be voted on another slip, labeled "County;" and all Judges of Courts voted for, will be voted on still another slip, labeled "Judiciary;" which divides the ticket, at the present election into three slips. All tickets should be ready cut, folded and tied, before election-day. Let Democrats attend to this everywhere, and see that all the ticket is included in their ballot.
