The other day I made a call, As ladies sometimes do, To hear the news my friends could tell, And tell them what I knew. And as we sat in social chat O'er steaming cups of tea, "I don't know what we're coming to?"

Says Mrs. Smith, says she. 'They're making laws at such a rate. It almost drives me wild ; They do not care for God, I think, For woman, man, or child. They've forced the negroes in the cars Along with you and me; And who knows where they'll force them next?'

Says Mrs. Smith, says she. Their children are to go to school Along with yours and mine, And if we white folks should object, Our rights we can resign. All social lines must be removed Because the blacks are free; Such things are not to be endured, Says Mrs. Smith, says she. "And not content with all these gifts.

Bestowed with lavish hand, The negroes must be fed and clothed Throughout the Southern land. The taxes now are high enough, But what they yet may be, 'Tis not in human power to guess,' Says Mrs. Smith, says she.

I do not mean the fawning smile of flattery, the studied smile of falsehood, the chilling smile of scorn, the cutting smile of revenge, the bitter smile of selfish triumph, the frozen smile of haughty pride, or the mocking smlle of hidden sorrow; but I mean that frank, truthful, soul-born smile that bursts like a radiant sunbeam over the countenance when once a human soul seeks the sympathy or communion of another. How purely beautiful or expressive the silent language! Words are but impudent mockery in its presence! How all-potent its powers! It bids the drooping spirits rise and soar upon the pinions of its own re-awakened melody; drives the lurking phantoms of doubt and jealousy from the clouded mind, and fills it with the cheering light of hope, and tells joy to sing again! Such a smile blessed memory brings me now. It rested on my pathway for one moment like heaven's choicest rays. The face from which it shone was a very plain one, yet at that moment it seemed an angel's. I never met another smile like that. Memory's loveliest treasures may fade-that one smile must ever retain its heaven-lighted beauty. Often when I turn brain-weary with the ceaseless toil of thought, or heart-sick of the world, its hollow homilies, its soulless mockery, or longing for one ray of youth, that one smile in all its pure beauty comes before me and bids me "be reconciled to human nature." There is character, too, in a smile. I care not what may be the countenance-let me see its natural smile, and I will tell you of the soul it revea lsor masks. Every kind, truthful smile, is a ray lent us from the brightness of our spirit home, by which we may lighten the dark places or dispel the clouds which arise along the way of our fellow travelers. They cost nothing, and I would that in this world of weariness and mourning there might be many more such smiles.

A SMILE .- Oh, the strange witch-

ery of a smile! Tell me where is there a heart so stubborn or so cold that it will not acknowledge the charm of a

CHEERFULNESS .- Dante places in his lowest hell those who in life were melancholy and pining without a cause, thus profaning and darkening God's blessed sunshine; and in some of the ancient Christian systems of virtues and vices, melancholy is unholy, and a vice; cheerfulness is holy, and a virtue. Lord Bacon also makes one of the characteristics of moral health and goodness to consist in "a constant quick sense of felicity, and a noble satisfaction." What moments, hours, days of exquisite felicity must Christ, our redeemer, have had, tho' it has become too customary to place him before us only in the attitude of pain and sorrow. Why should he be always crowned with thorns, bleeding with wounds, weeping over the world he was appointed to heal, to save, to reconcile with God? The radiant head of Christ in Raphael's Transfiguration should rather be our ideal of Him who came "to bind up the broken hearted, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

POWER OF A HORSE'S SCENT .---There is one perception that a hors up fight, and record your judgment by lives that were lost, because of the in- been paid to, and that is the power of yeas and nays. I care not how few terruption of free speech, and because scent. With some horses it is as acute vote with me, nor how many vote a- it does gross injustice to the people of as with the dog; and for the benefit of those that have to drive nights, snch as physicians and others, this knowledge is valuable. I never knew it to fail, and I have ridden hundreds of miles dark nights; and in consideration of this power of scent this is my simple advice; never check your horse nights, but give him a free head, and you may rest assured that he will never get off the road, and will carry you expeditiously and safely. In regard to the power of scent in a horse, I once knew one of a pair that was stolen, and recovered mainly by the track being made out by his mate, and that after he had been absent six or eight hours."

> A MANLY HUSBAND .- A reporter was around hunting a house for a friend and called to see a family who were preparing to vacate a cosy dwelling. As the door stood open the reporter walked in without knocking, and his eyesstraightway lighted on the dame of the household who was making frantic lunges with the broomstick under the bed.

"Good morning madam. Ah! you have a troublesome cat under the bed." "Troublesome cat? No sir! it's that sneeking husband of mine; and I'll have him out or break every bone in his body!'.

"You will eh?" said a faint voice under the bed. "No, Susy, you may rave and pound, and pound and rave, but I'll be dogged if I'll come out from under this bed while I've got the spirit of a man about me!"

POINTS IN A GOOD MILKER .- A correspondent in the Country Gentleman says:-

"In selecting a milker, look well to be wide and broad, not hanging down shows that it is flesh, not milk, that distends it."

A BOY PREACHER IN WALES .- A boy preacher has appeared in Wales, who, according to his admirers, is to extinguish Mr. Spurgeon. This promising youth is Master Enoch Probert, a crowded congregation in the Baptist chapel at Gladestry, Radnor. A local print says of him: "He has a sweet and powerful voice, which he manages well. His delivery is remarkably dis-
