MODERATE COUNSELS. The calm of the public mind has not

gress. The several elections in the early part of November were followed by a peace that passed all expectation. Up to that event, the conflict of parties was waxing more and more fierce as each week passed by, and the gravest apprehensions were felt as to the result of the war of opinions. At no period since the failure of the rebellion, has the sky appeared more threatening than during the month of October last. Such was the violence of party men, so fearful were the extreme views they were disposed to press, in the struggle to keep or gain the power, that dispassionate men who stand aloof from the struggle of contending factions were at a loss to understand whereunto this thing would grow.

But the elections were followed by an ominous and expressive calm. We have read the journals represen ting the extremes of both sides, and they draw one and the same lessonthat moderate counsels must prevail; the war is over; slavery is dead; secession is buried; peace has returned; harvests of grain have been gathered from fields fattened with brothers' blood; the wanderers have come back; let us kill the fatted calf and be glad; the nation was (almost) dead and is alive again, was lost and is found. This is the public sentiment of the American ness community which obeys the inpeople. This sentiment dictates concilation and gentleness, with justice and prudence. This spirit requires us to do as we would be done by. It forbids to break the bruised reed. It demands of us to lay no burdens on our brethren mechanic to supply him with a numwhich we are not willing ourselves to bear. the ancient feelings of American union

The following account of this remarkable piece of mechanism purports to be taken from the Persian manuscript, called "The History of Jerusalem:"

The sides of it were of pure gold, the feet of emeralds and rubies intermixed with pearls, each of which were as large as an ostrich's egg. The throne had cavan sides; on each side were delineated orchards full of trees, the branches of which were of precious stones, representing fruit, ripe and unripe; on the tops of the trees were to be seen figures of birds of plumage, particularly the peacock, the etanh, and the karges. All these birds were hollowed bunches of grapes, composed of precious stones of various kings, fashioned in such a manner as to represent the various colors of purple, violet, green and red, so as to render the appearance of real fruit. On the second step, on each side of the throne, were two lions of terrible aspect, large as life, and formed of cast gold. The nature of this remarkable throne was such that when Solomon placed his foot on the first steps, the birds spread their wings and made a fluttering noise in the air. On his reaching the third step, the whole assemblage of demons, and fairies, and men, repeated the praises of the Deity. When he arrived at the fourth step, voices were heard addressing him in the following manner: "Son of David, be thankful for the blessings which the Almighty has bestowed upon us." The same was repeated on his reaching the fifth step. On his reach. ing the sixth, all of the children of Israel joined them; and on his arrival at the seventh, all the birds and animals became in motion, and ceased not until he had placed himself on the royal seat, varieties, Pocket Ledgers, Time Books, weekly and when the birds, lions and other animals, by secret springs, discharged a shower of the most precious perfumes on Solomon, after which two of the karges de-

'Here is a newspaper, fold it, and button it in your breast pocket. Now I will not promise you it will still be there when you leave the Perfecture!' The director laughed, and declared it was impossible, while he carefully placed the newspaper at the side of his pocket-book. The two gentlemen remained some time in conversation during which the Prefect of Police was receiving people and writing orders. When the director rose to go, M. Carlier, after shaking hands with him, said: 'By-the-by, I suppose you have the newspaper all right!' "Business is business," "and a contract is a contract." These are sound commercial maxims, but the following incident illustrates the nature of the busispired injunction, "Look not every by native enginers.—San Francisco Alman on his own things, but every man, also, on the things of others:" A merchant of New York, during the late war, made a contract with a ber of tin cans. Not long after this the tractor must lose money by completing the ware at the price agreed upon. However, he said nothing, but went on delivering the cans. When the first bill for the pay of the cans was received, the employer called upon him and

"I understand you are losing money on this job."

"Yes," replied the contractor, "but I can stand it; a contract is a contract, you know." "How much will you lose?" asked the gentleman.

"O, no matter," was the reply: I don't complain, and you ought not "I insist on knowing."

"Well, since you desire it, I shall lose so much a hundred," naming the amount. JAPANESE MAPS.

There are now in this city some specimens of the work of Japanese which shows that they have attained a proficiency in some branches almost if not quite equal to our own. One of these is a large map of the Imperial City of Yeddo, apparently executed by lithographic process, or something similar, and finished up in colors. No job of this kind, executed in Europe or Amerca, could excel it in minutences of detail and careful neatness of execution. The streets, many of which are seventeen miles in length, are all laid down with apparent mathematical exactness, the vast system of canals like those of Venice, but on an immensely extended scale, is also exhibited, and the location of the Imperial Palace and grounds, covering several square miles of territory, and the palaces of some 250 princes who reside in the city, are all given. The city is said to contain 1,500,000 houses, and 5,000,000 people, and to have a commerce more extensive by far than that of any city on earth, though this last seems incredible. Another is a birdseye view of Yokohama, with the foreign quarter to prevent indiscriminate commingling of the races, the harbor, the surrounding hils, &c. These maps were purchased by a gentleman now in this city, at a native stationer's shop in Yokohama, and are said to be, as in fact they must almost necessarily be, entirely of native workmanship. No foreigners have yet been allowed to settle in Yeddo, and the surveys of that city from which the map was made must have been wholly

A PEEP INTO BRIGHAM YOUNG'S SERAGLIO.

But let us seek a field of interest. Here on our right hand are the private grounds of him who ruleth in Zion, Brigham Young. Twenty acres he owns in the heart of the city, where are pleasant walks and floral beauties, surrounded by a stone wall. Within this enclosure are three princely mansions, where live his thirty wives and numberless progeny. Each of these houses carries a name, that disorder and confusion may not arise in the camp of Israel. They are the Bee Hive House, Lion House and White House on the Hill. This mighty wall is designed to shut out the world, to exclude inquisitive sight, but we shall venture to describe the scene within. It is the hour of sunset, gilding the mountains with rapturous light .-We approach the massive iron gates, and unlike Moore's disconsolate Peri, we are permitted to enter the domestic paradise. Strolling leisurely along the grassy walks, our attention is attracted to the singular movements of an elderly woman, her hair streaked with silver threads, yet with a step firm and elastic. This evening's air is inviting, and she seems to enjoy the freshness. In her hand is an open book (can it be "Griffith Gaunt; or jealousy?") which closes with a nervous twitch of the hand as her fading eye rekindles with a look that would seem to say, 'Oh, how I despise you!' This woman, forty years ago, became Brigham Young's first wife. But who can be the victim of that malignant scorning? What poor mortal is being crushed between her clenched teeth? Can it be I, only a looker-ona harmless and unoffending Gentile? No; but we have discovered the study of her hate—the bohum upas that has been planted in her side. Yonder is a cluster of trees-they are aspen and maple-and under their thin, yellowtinged tops, is a bright eyed woman of twenty summers, who now leans upon an old man's arm. By what power we know not, but, as if drawn by magic hand, our steps are directed thithersents a new phase of the negro voting ward. The now mistress of the heart breathes poetic words; he, old man that he is, and slave of sensualism, treads approving glances. This man is Briglast and much the prettiest wife.
