ADVICE TO YOUNG MECHANICS. In referring to the growing inclination on the part of young men, after they have served long and hard apprenticeships to acquire a good trade, to abandon this mode of making a living and to enter the legal or medical profession, where it is supposed greater emoluments can be secured and larger honors won, a cotemporary well observes that in nineteen cases out of JOB PRINTING, of every kind, done with twenty such ventures are failures, for neatness and dispatch. The GAZETTE OFFICE has two reasons: First, the professions require peculiar talent and the most thorough education. As a rule, apprentices to the trades have neither the time nor the means to acquire this education. Hence, when a mechanic at the end of his apprenticeship aspires to and enters any one of the professions, he does so at a great disadvantage. He may be a fluent speaker, know how to argue a point in a debating society or harangue a crowd at a ward meeting, but such talents do not fit him for the legal profession. He may know how to extract a splinter from fy him as a good nurse, does not fit him for the medical profession. The fact is, the young men who abandon their trades are tempted to do so by a feeling of false pride, erroneously ed in a pursuit of the mechanical arts.

The brightest names which now adorn the annals of all countries are of the best mechanics who have blessed genius. All that is beautiful and grand out sir: I will find some one who is the result of improvement in mechanics. TURKISH WOMEN.

theory of the Turks is that women are created to be slaves and bear children. As a consequence, their education and refinement are wholly neglected. Their ignorance is accompanied with an amount of superstition and fanaticism almost beyond the imagination. They give themselves up to the ideal entirely. Their minds are peopled with spirits and genii that hold high carnival and dethrone the reason. When sick, the spiritual physician attends before the regular practitioner, and his means of disenchantment are often more potent than medicines. The priest has unlimited sway over their beliefs, and that he has power to exercise the devil, raise the dead, and perform countless miracles, is accepted as part of their religious teaching. Their devotion to the Koran and to the Mohammedon religion is as sincere as it was 1,200 years ago. Indeed, female society is the same in Turkey as it was women, steeped in superstition and ignorance, revelling in the errors of heathen ages and reeking all over with unchristian and uncivilized enormities, with them, for the efforts of the priests condition, and the interests that huscomplish any good.
