ERS .- There is a good deal of speculation and some curiosity in regard to the new spring bonnets, which a sight of them will hardly repay. There is absolutely very little about them that is new. The shapes are the same as last year, varied a little in the making and the trimming. They are as small as ever, and incline decidedly to the narrow flaring or standing brim, with a crown, but no cape. The latter is replaced by a lace fall, or mantille, which is crossed in front, and forms second strings over ties made of nar-

Calotte. This is made with a soft crown and a small brim which retreats at the sides, but is very slightly rolled. A scarf of lace or frosted tulle finishes it at the back and forms second strings. The "Metternich" has a raised brim

with the brim standing up; and the "Columbia," named after some young American ladies who have been the the fashion in Paris this winter, has a double brim, fan shaped, which is graceful upon some as it is unbecoming to

The "Grand Duchesse" is a round hat, turned up on one side, and trimmed with a wide scarf of lace, one end of which is left hanging at the back.

The "Marie Antoinette" has a higher crown, and a wider, somewhat rolling brim. It may be trimmed with blue ribbon or roses, or with a wreath, one end of which forms a cordon, which descends upon the shoulders.

Very distinguished bonnets are of black lace, frosted and trimmed with steel, or of black lace trimmed with natural grasses; and very simple yet ity, even. He cannot bring himself to pretty straw bonnets are trimmed with several rows of narrow velvet dotted with cut steel or fire gilt buttons, very small, full velvet rosettes, and a lace mantille the color of the velvet.

Colored blondes and laces are among the novelties in trimming, and largely used. A pretty effect is also produced by grey tulle, dotted with steel, over grey crape. The ornaments are grey velvet leaves frosted with steel.
