IN MEMORIAM.

DAUGHERTY—On the 8th day of December, 1868, at his residence in Bedford, Pa., after a brief illness, Hon. William T. Daugherty, aged 57 years, 4 months and 7 days.

The subject of this notice, whose age is as stated above, was born in the borough of Bedford, on the 1st day of August, 1811. He began his career from the humbler walks of life—and the conspicuous part that he subsequently performed in its "fiful drama" is the writers apology for this further impered tribute to his memory. It is said, that the story of every human life, if rightly told, may convey a lesson to those who survive. His was an instance in which success was acheived without the brilliant qualities, which the world calls genius, but by what is better far, a sound judgment, a resolute purpose to pursue the right, and capacity to gather wisdom from experience. Whilst quite young, as I gather from his earliest companions, he was remarked as a boy of great assiduity, with a clear, strong and vigorous mind—poor indeed, and as it would seem, almost alone he rose from the quiet walks of life, that seemed at first to promise little hope of advancement to the various positions of public eminence which he filled hefore he died. Quisapte suae fortunae, faber,—"Every one is the architect of his own fortune," seemed to be the motto upon which he lived and asted,—and whether viewed as the young aspiring merchant, a judge, a legislator, or a private sitizen, he was always seem moving among his fellow men with manifestations of constant respect for their rights and their positions, and was ever distinguished by that constant deference to otherwhich is always the characteristic of excessive modesty and available talents.

In 1813, he was put forward by his friends for the position of Associate Judge of the several Courts of the county, and on the 25th of February of that year received the appointment and was accommission, of that date, signed by Francis R. Shunk then Governor, entiting him to hold the office by a majority considerably exceeding that of any parts of Huntingdon, Fulton and Bedford counties, he was familiar, and readily forsaw what it would speedily become when once afforded the proper facilities necessary to its development. He was among the first laborers for the enterprise and entered upon the work with the same carnest heart and determined will, that he engaged in everything. The task seemed herculean, and to some, of less resolution, impracticable. Yet he never paused until he saw success crowning that vast public enterprise, and found himself, also, the possessor of a comfortable fortune, thus proving again to the world, by his example, that—"For a bright manhood there is no such word as fail!"

thus proving again to the world, by his exactapie, that—"For a bright manhood there is no such word as fail!"

But life and its busy scenes on this side the grave are now closed on him forever; and he has left us to chase for a little while longer the shadows which he has exchanged for unutterable realities; Here, where his character was best understood, and his usefulness and virtues most highly appreciated, his loss as a public man, and a private friend, is most painfully felt and deeply lamented. In all the relations of private life, as son, husband, father, friend, in the family and social circle, he was leved and honored as well from the amenity of his manner as from the kindness of his heart. But, perhaps, we should—"Weep not for him who dieth,
For he sleeps and is at rest;
And the couch on which he lieth,
Is the green earth's quiet breast!"
In this passing notice, there is not room to do full or ample justice to the memory of the deceased. Outside of his own family circle, I knew him perhaps more intimately than any one else. The friend of many, he was also my friend, though I perhaps more intimately than any one else. The friend of many, he was also my friend, though can here but feebly express the sentiments of a fectionate regard with which an intimate acquain tance of many years had inspired me.

And now friend of my early years—

"When hearts whose truth is proyen. When hearts whose truth is proven,

Like thine, are laid in earth There should a wreath be woven To tell the world their worth; And I, who woke each morrow

To greet thy hand with mine,
Who shared thy joy and sorrow,
Whose weal and woe were thine,
It should be mine to braid it
Around thy faded brow, But I've in vain essayed it, And feel I cannot now. While memory bids me weep thee, Nor thoughts nor words are free, The grief is fixed too deeply That mourns a man like thee."

INFORMATION FOR THE PEOPLE,

The largest, best and cheapest subscription book ever published, and endorsed by all Literary People in Europe and America.

As well to supply a much needed want in our own country by diffusing correct information in a form best adapted to our people, as to gratify repeated solicitations from friends to issue an American edition of this valuable work, the Publishers have undertaken the enterprise. The vast amount of illustrated trash that has flooded the country for some years past demands a book of this character, for the benefit of those who wish to read for instruction and entertanneaut, instead of cheap pictures and sensational newspaper clippings bound up in form of and sold for books.

This great work is of itself a complete and select library for every family. Containing over 3,000 closely printed pages, on all subjects of popular interest, from the best authors, and especially adapted to the wants of the people. The daily inquiries received as to date of issue give assurances of an extraordinary sale. By applying at once, agents will se ure a choice of territory for a book that will sell to everybody, regardless of sect, party, or section. Send for circulars, and see our terms and a full description of this mammoth work.
