PREMIUMS .- Below we give the amounts paid as premiums, in the counties named, for the killing of dangerous and destructive animals and birds. It will be seen that Huntingdon county takes the lead, while Bedford, to which the Huntingdon county Act was extended a year ago, follows suit. The provisions of the act were not thoroughly understood in all parts of this county; if they had been, our expenses for the destruction of foxes, owls, &c., would have been materially larger. We question the propriety of extending the Huntingdon act to this county, but so long as it stands on the statute book its provisions must be carried out.
