A LOSS of over 6,000 radical votes in Connecticut and Rhode Island, since last fall, is claimed by the Inquirer as a victory for its party. As Pennsylvania polls six times as many votes as these two States together, where would a proportionate loss in the old Keystone leave the radicals? Six times 6,000 are 36,000. Can you stand that next fall, Mr. Inquirer ?

THE radical papers make a practice of croaking faintly about the enormities of the legislature, just after that furnish exactly what every lady needs body adjourns, but when the time for nominations arrives and the election draws near, a Sabbath hush prevails among them on that subject, and they generally support for election the very them worth more than the price of the men they complain of, or others equally bad. Now, this is child's play; nay, worse, it is cowardice and fraud. We ask the public to note how many radical journals will keep up the war against a repetition of the iniquities of the last legislature.

THE radical editors who sneeze when Grant takes snuff, pretend to be entirely satisfied with the appointment of Longstreet, Crow, Martin and other ex-Confederates, to lucrative offices under the new administration. These editors pretty generally desire to be made fellow office-holders with those "red-handed rebels," and therefore, the treason of Longstreet, Crow and Martin does not look so ugly in their eyes as it once did.

THE Inquirer still glorifies over the Snap Judgment of the legislature by which the people of Pennsylvania are to be deprived forever of the right to control the question of suffrage. We are not a whit astonished. The Inquirer is bound to go to H--ayti with the radical leaders.

REPEAL is the word! Democrats and Republicans who haven't the Congressional collar around their necks, will rally under the banner of Ripon, Wis., involving a loss of $40,-REPEAL and wipe the disgrace of the 000. XVIh Amendment surrender from the record of Pennsylvania.

A QUEER SUIT AND QUEERER VER-DICT .- The Charlestown "Spirit of Jefferson" mentions an occurrence of recent date, growing out of the memorable capture of Major General Kelly. in his bed in this city, by a detatchment of McNeill's men, in February, 1865. General Kelly, it seems, lost his horse at the time of the capture, which fell in the hands of the confederate General Rosser. The animal was wounded, in 1868, it is calculated from a census and after the war, was restored by Genroughly taken, amounted to 38,422,995 | eral Rosser to General Kelly, upon the request of the latter. Among the party who captured General Kelly in bed was Mr. John S Arnold, now residing in Mineral county, West Virginia, and being a man of means, General Kelly brought suit against him in that county and recovered $350 damages for the injuries received by the horse. The "Spirit of Jefferson" says the only witness in the case was General B. F. Kelly himself, who swore that he saw Mr. Arnold riding the horse the day after the capture. Mr. Arnold was made to pay pretty dearly for one day's ride on General Kelly's steed, but as the horse was regularly captured in war, reasonable people will consider both reason,-Cumberland Paper.
