THE WARNING AT THE BRIDGE. In the year 1861, I was superintendent of the Howrich and Rocky River

BEDFORD, PA. THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 3, 1870.

Railroad. It was a line that done a good run of business, connecting as it did a great city with a flourishing back country, and we run a pretty good number of trains over the rails in the course of twenty four hours.

The daily trains were every hour, but after nine in the evening there was only one train until the steamboat accommodation of half past three in the morning. This intervening train was the Bel-port mail. It was made up at Belport, and ran as far as Clinton, express all the way. Belport was the large city of which I have spoken, and it was there my office was located, for the business of the road was all settled and arranged at that end of the line. Of course I give fictitious names, and the reader need not expect to find

Belport on any railway map. 12:30 train, or the midnight mail, as it was more frequently designated, was run by Earl Rogers, a young man of seven or eight and twenty, who had been employed on the road for several

He was the best engine driver on the corporation, and for that reason he had been elected for the train, because there was a better lookout required by night. Earl taken all in all, was one of the finest fellows I ever saw. Frank, handsome, generous to fault, and very well educated. He had fallen into the vocation of an engineer more for his love of excitement and danger than anything else, perhaps; and if there was any particularly perilous business to be done, Earl Rodgers was our man.

For some time he had been desperately in love with Laura Demain, the daughter of a rich old fellow, just on the other side of the Rocky river, a half a dozen miles beyond Belport.

This love was fully returned, for Laura was a noble hearted girl and did not care for wealth and ambition when weighed in the balance with love; but old Demain and she were two, and there was no probability of his ever giving his consent. He had set his heart on her marrying Prince Carleton, a young blood of the vicinity, reputed wealthy, and of an old family.

Demain's opposition naturally made the lovers more determined, and they only waited an increase of Earl's salary to be married, in spite of papa Demain. Earl was a faithful fellow, and I was doing my best with the company to get an advance for him, with every probability of success.

Somehow, I took a strong interest in Earl's love affairs. I am an old codger, and love matters are rather out of my line, my forte being the calculating of accounts, the regulation of freight rates; and the management of business so as to secure the fattest dividends to the stockhol-

Perhaps my interest in Earl's love for Laura might be because I most cordially detested Prince Carleton. He was always "blowing" our road, finding fault with the rate of speed with the grade, with the carriages, with the ventilation, with everything in short, for nothing suited him. Then upon one occasion he and I had a few words neither very pleasant nor very choice and he had called me an old scoundrel, and I returned the compliment with interest. After that we were worse friends than ever. One dark rainy night in November, just after the nine o'clock train had been got off, and I was sitting in the office trying to balance an account that would not balance, the door opened and Earl Rogers walked in. He had on his waterproof suit the hood over head, and the collar buttoned closely, but I saw that his face was very pale and his eyes gleamed with an unnattural fire.

"What in the world has happened, Rogers? said I. You look as glum as if you were going to your own funer-

"Mr. Woodbury," said he earnestly. 'Do you believe in presentments?" "No," said I. "I certainly do not, they are old woman's whims!" "Perhaps so. I wish I could think so," said he sadly. "I have been trying hard to," "What is it Earl? Anything gone wrong with Laura?" for I did not know but the little jade had been playing off with him after the manner of

"No, you will laugh at me, Mr. Woodbnry, but I must tell somebody, or I will go out of my wits," said he half laughing, "and before heaven I tell you it is all truth. Thursday afternoon I took a hand car and went over to Rocky River Bridge. I do not mind confessing that I went on pur--perhaps of herself. I stood at one scarlet shaw! which I knew was hers | bolical revenge. flitting in and out through the shrubbery of the garden. "And while I was looking at her I heard footsteps, and glancing up I saw myself coming up from the opposite side of the bridge! I was dressed in this suit of waterproof, my face was as pale as death, and my wide open eyes were blank and expressionless!

"Sir, you think I am dazed, but I'm telling you only the truth! While I about it. stood staring at the vision it disappeared, and weak and trembling I came back to town. By the next day-yesterday, I had reasoned myself out of belief in anything of the kind. It was a I hallucination, I said, and to prove it so, I would go out there again and see if it would appear for the second time. I went again yesterday, and sir, the same thing was repeated! It will come once more-and then I shall go to my death!" "Nonsense!" said I. "Come Earl, be honest, and confess that you had been taking too much whisky."

"I never drink anything as you know, Mr. Woodbury," returned he, 'and this thing was fearfully real. If I run the mail train out to-night, I shall be killed, and heaven knows suppose it could not be taken off for to-night.

"Taken off! What the deuce do you mean?" snapped I, "this road runs trains as advertised! Cowardly engineers to the contrary notwithstanding. He looked at me sadiy, reproachfully-and I could have kicked myself for the way I had spoken to him. "It was not on my own account sir, said he, but it is only a few days before thanksgiving, and the train will be a full one. If there is an accident it may be a bad one."

'Accident!" said I contemptuously, let us laugh at you."

He bid me good-night gravely and went out. Presently the clock struck twelve, and I heard three sharp successive whistles that told me that the train was nearly ready. A strange feeling of apprehension seized me. What if anything should happen? Yielding to an impulse which would not be controlled, I threw on my overcoat, turned out the gas, locked the office and hurried over to the depot justin season to catch the tail of the rear car and swing myself on board. Earl Rogers stood at his post, pale and silent, yet altered and watchful. By the head light on the locomotive he could see the track for half a mile ahead, and his keen eye scanned every inch of the way as the train swept on.

Past Roman station-past the Mill Cut-past Hill's embankment, and they plunged into the belt of woods which skirted Rocky River. Suddenly, as they swept around the curve Earl's cheek whitened and he drew his breath in quick and hard! What he saw before the train warned him that only death and destruction lay ahead. He could probably save himself by leaping off, but that would doom all on board. Not a second did he hesitate. The sharp whistle to down breaks ounded. He reversed steam and did everything in his power to stop the shrill whistles from the escaping steam, all was still! Not one of the carriages went down, the first one halted on the very brink of the abyss, as if to impress more fearfully upon the minds of the passengers the terrible danger they had escaped. Before the train had come to a stop, I had jumped out and was flying forward, looking for Earl Rogers. They pointed into the river in answer to my inquiries, and seizing a lantern from the hand of one of the brakesmen, I soon climbed down the bank and found him. He lay under a wreck of the locomotive, pale and bloody, with no breath coming from his icy lips. The two stokers were a little way off, stone dead. I am an old man, but I didn't feel the weight of that poor fellow as I carried him up the bank, and on to the house of Demain, which happened to be the to consciusness. She was all courage and hope; but lieve that her presence and her care brought him back from death. She never flinched while the surgeon amputated his leg at the knee, it was the only way to save him, Doctor Green said, and Laura held the poor head of her patient to her bosom, and his hands in hers through the whole operation. The accident, it was found had been occasioned by a stick of timber across the track, and the railroad company offered a reward of a thousand dollars for the discovery of the rascally perpetrator. No matter how we found it out, but it was ascertained beyond a doubt that Prince Carleton was the guilty party. FARMERS COLUMN.

A well-drained, well-worked soil will make good hay, and no other soil will do it.

The Canada Farmer says that the natural course of vege ation does not exhaust, but rather enriches the soil, by eliminating plant food, and restoring it to the land in decayed vegetable matter. It is the artificial method of growing crops and removing them entirely from the land, without any re-

Associated dairies originated in Switzerland, where the poor peasants were o bliged to combine the milk of their single cows to make cheese to compete with theirrich neighbors. American dairymen combine to perfect their productions, by securing the best conveniences and appliances for converting milk into cheese and butter, fit for transportation, and of a style that shall suit the taste of consumers, A mysterious and alarming cattle disease has appeared at Catawba. Clark county, Ohio. Cows have been milked according to custom in the evening, and nothing unusual was noticed .-Shortly after they became uneasy, and in five minutes fell down dead. They commenced swelling shortly after-so much so that they burst when the hide was punctured. An examination was made by skilled cattle men, but they could ascribe no cause for their death. Millions of dollars are yearly received for fruit, where but a quarter of a century ago, there was no one thought of selling. And this is the case to a greater or lesser extent with many other products. Potatoes are an important cash crop in many places where but a few years ago there was no demand for them. There is an increasing demand for the various animal products; many of which are made from grass, hay, and other coarse and cheap feed. And yet, after fruit, some of these products are foremost among those increasing the fastest in value.-Many of these products are cheaply grown in mixed farming, the refuse of some products affording food for oth-

The Sweet Potato.-The New Orleans Picayune says that the sweet potato impoverishes the soil far less than grain crops, and is produced in far greater abundance. It yields from 15,-000 to 20,000 pounds to the acre, while beaten half an hour. Butter the forms, corn yields only from 1,000 to 1,200 pounds. The trouble has been that these potatoes cannot be kept.
