THE LOCAL NEWSPAPER.

A Tribute from a Leading Daily to the Local Press of the Country.

The Rochester Democrat gives the following endorsement to the local newspaper: We know of no impropriety less justifiable than the ceaseless finding fault with one's local paper. We do not propose discussing the difficulties under which a newspaper is prepared, nor do we attend to lay down rules by which one may judge whether or not a paper is worthy the patronage of its constituents. One thing is certain: the world would be a dreadfully dreary place were the local newspapers suddenly to die out. The American people, we verily believe, would actually become wild if all newspapers should cease publication for a twelve-month. There are many thousand newspapers in the land, but by no means as many as there shall be fifty years hence. The press is a recognized necessity. The damp, fresh sheet laid daily or weekly at your doors, gives you the world in miniature. You read its comely column, and feel the pulsations of the mighty mass of humanity, and become en rapport with all its movements. Some people are all too prone to depreciate their own local newspapers and magnify the merits of out-of-town newspapers. As a rule the local newspaper is as good a paper as the community in which it is published will support. Occasionally we find cities and villages which are not properly taken care of by their papers, but in this day of fierce competition, there are always those standing ready with the requisite brains and capital to fill "wants long felt," and if people will subscribe and pay for a good paper, they can always be accommodated with a prime article. We do not respect a person who either himself speaks or permits others to speak slightingly of a local newspaper. Citizens have a certain obligation in this matter as well as publishers. It is their duty to be loyal to the press, and to sustain it in all that it does which is not prejudicial to the best interests of the community. There is scarcely a city in New York State that has not excellent newspapers, and those communities which best sustain a local newspaper by advertising and subscriptions, as a rule, have the most enterprising and reliable papers. Perhaps there is no part of the continent better provided with newspapers than Western New York. Besides the dailies of Rochester, Buffalo, Lockport Elmira, Binghamton and Auburn,—all of them of more than ordinary merit, and some of them without superiors anywhere—what better toned, better edited, better patronized weeklies can anywhere be found than are published in the State in general and its western wing in particular? Our people read much, they have excellent discrimination; their standard of a good newspaper is high and all things considered they have no sufficient cause of complaint that their desires are not faithfully responded to by publishers. "The survival of the fittest," obtains in newspapers as in the development of species, and every town and city will have just such papers as it is willing and given an opportunity to pay for. Encourage publishers by your patronage—not as a charity, dear sir, for you always get more than you give,—always speak a good word for your papers, and you will never have yourselves to blame if the local press does not meet your expectations and desires.

LIFE IN BRAZIL.

Those who sigh for a lodge in Brazil should read what Mr. Bigg Withers writes of the beauties of that country: "The mosquito makes his home in these wilds. A tiny fly, called polvora, from being so small and multitudious as atoms of dust, passes through the meshes of the finest net, then penetrates hair and beard, and sticks its venomous probofis into the skin. The loathsome tick named carapetto, when disturbed on the cones and twigs by the foot of the passer-by, swarms up the trowsers' legs and fastens upon the flesh. It is so firm a bite that if it is plucked off its head is left buried deep in the flesh, diffusing a virulent poison of its own. The hairy caterpiller, by day or night equally beautiful, luminously phosphorescent in the dark, and with a covering of brilliant hues like delicately formed moss, the ends of which branch into pointed antlers, inflict with every point of these a very painful sting. There is a lively red ant whose tormenting powers are not to be dispised. But one of the worst enemies of mankind, as well as cattle and hogs, is a big spotted fly which comes along silently and pricks the body of its victim. It sucks no blood and instills no venom; its minute weapon instantly withdrawn, leaves no soreness or irritation at the time. The man thus slightly punctured does not rub or scratch himself. He little knows he has received the deposit of an egg which will soon become a wriggling maggot, half an inch long after one week's growth, but capable of growing to an inch and a quarter in length and half an inch in thickness. With fine rings of black spikes or bristles around its body, it has a horrid trick of revolving on its own axis, tearing the flesh anew by its hourly evolutions. Mules, oxen, and wild deer suffer likewise from the hideous visitation. Wasps and hornets there are, of course There is a small black, stingless bee, which crowd so thick upon exposed parts of the body as to leave no room for a mosquito to alight. As the bee only tickles, instead of biting, stinging or laying an egg, it is welcome; but it is impossible to eat without devouring half a dozen or more."

PRACTICAL KNOWLEDGE.

Those parents who believe that they have done all they can for their sons by giving them a liberal school education, make one of the most distressing mistakes that afflicts modern society and business circles. No class of young men in city or country is so deserving of pity as those who have a good education, good morals, but no practical knowledge of the solid business affairs of life. They are deserving of pity because they are really deserving of a better position in life than their capabilities will warrant, and because they are not to blame for being unfitted for responsible positions. Thousands of well educated young men walk the streets of the cities, even in the flush of prosperous times, who do not earn their livelihood, and go seeking day after day such positions as they believe their talents demand, and meet with disappointment at every turn. It is a noteworthy fact that nearly, if not quite, all of the great, good and substantial business men of our country have come up from boyhood familiar with the use of the axe, plow, forge or plane; and they are not now, nor have they ever been ashamed to own that their hands have been hardened with toil. Labor is a great gift; it is a promoter of health, and hence of happiness and prosperity. No young man is without the means of success who is willing to work. Let him secure an education adapted to the practical affairs of life and with his habits of industry and perseverance, success will be certain, no matter how many obstacles may have beset his early career.

BOYS RUN MAD.

That in a single month at least fifteen boys have run away from comfortable homes in different parts of the country to seek adventures is a pretty serious fact, says an exchange. That nearly all these boys have prefaced their flight by robbing their parents is a very serious fact. Yet these are only the first fruits from the evil seed that is being scattered daily and weekly all over the country in flashy dime novels and flashier illustrated story papers The three Brooklyn lads who ran away a while ago, one of them stealing $125 from his father, had had their heads turned by these publications. So had the four Illinois lads, the oldest not 17, who, in a letter left for their parents, announced that they had gone to Kansas to "scalp Indians;" so had the two Iowa boys who stole away down the river, in a skiff, perhaps with the purpose of rivaling or surpassing the exploits of the "Boy Pirates;" so had the interesting Oconomowoc youth, aged 14, who stole enough money to buy four revolvers, and then left his pleasant Wisconsin home to become a "Texas ranger." These are only average sample cases, not the worst by any means. In several recent instances, pricked on by ambition to equal the brilliant feats of the "Boy Burglar," school children hardly in their teens have set up as housebreakers; in at least one instance, at St. Louis, they have turned their attention to highway robbery. We repeat, this is a serious condition of things; and it is becoming more serious all the while, because the infection of these poisonous publications is steadily spreading. It is high time for parents to be inquiring whether there is not some effectual means of checking it.

ASHES TO ASHES.

The dead body of a man was carried through the streets of New York to Greenwood cemetery. Only eight carriages followed the plain hearse. As the unpretending cortege threaded its way through the noonday roar and whirl of trafic, not one passer by in a thousand turned his head to look at it. But less than one short decade ago, says the New York Sun, the man whose body lay in that coffin was the domineering ruler of New York city. His breath made and unmade men. A scratch of his pen, a word from his lips, was fortune. His antechambers were thronged with suitors. Politicians fawned upon him; capitalists contended for his smiles; Governors, Senators, Congressmen humbled themselves before him; he controlled courts of law, and had many Judges at his beck; he had Legislatures in his pocket.

Had he died at that time what a mourning we should have seen—the flags at half-mast, the public buildings draped, Broadway in black from the Central Park to the Battery! The only mourners at Tweed's funeral were his kinsfolk, a few old friends, and a few poor people whom his bounty had warmed and fed.

A CHILD BRIDE'S MARRIED LIFE.—Married at 13; choked and kicked down stairs in three weeks after the orange blossoms had been written up; a three years' voyage on a matrimonial tide, in which there were more breakers than smooth seas, more clouds than sunshine; a shiver before the point of a pistol in the hands of a jealous husband, who added to the chill of the blood by threatening to dash a bottle of vitriol in the polibe court for safety! This is the summary of a history which was repeated in the West Side court yesterday, before Justice Morrison, by Mrs. Stevens, a 15-year-old wife.—Chicago Times.

It happened in this wise: They were coming off the steamer across the plank together. She was afraid the plank would tip and she should fall. He said, "Never fear. In that case we shall die together." She looked into his face and said, "If it's all the same to Providence, I should much prefer to live together." And the next week the parson tied the knot.

FAVORITE PUBLICATIONS.

Frank Leslie's Chimney Corner.—This beautiful periodical, the best American Family Journal, Story Paper and home Friend, has been the successful rival of all the weekly journals for the past thirteen years. It gained a place in the minds and hearts of our people, and now the name of its patrons is Legion.

This year the CHIMNEY CORNER seems to be better than ever. Its serial stories are of the most absorbing character, of great power, true to life and full of merit, taking a wide range of subjects to please every member of a household—the domestic story for the mother, the charming love-tale for the daughters, the more dramatic for the young men, the solid novel for older readers, and then we have stirring adventure for the boys and fairy-tales for the children.

Haliburton, Howard, Robinson, De Forest, Benedict, S. Annie Frost, Annie Thomas Etta W. Pierce, and other eminent writers, are its regular contributors. The subjects treated of are very varied. The illustrations are profuse and are all beautiful. Short Stories, extremely interesting are completed in each number, while Biographies, Adventures, Essays, Fun, Travels, Natural History, Legends, Anecdotes, Science, etc., make this publication one of the most entertaining in existence.

Exquisite steel engravings are frequently given away to its subscribers.

The CHIMNEY CORNER, sixteen pages, with eight pages of Illustrations, printed on fine paper, is published every Monday, price only 10 cents; annual subscription, $4, postpaid. Address your orders to Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 537 Pearl Street, New York.

Frank Leslie's Lady's Journal, 16 pages, issued weekly contains excellent Pictures and full descriptions of the very latest Styles of Ladies and Children's Wear; useful information on Family Topics; Select Stories; Beautiful Illustrations of Home and Foreign Subjects; Poetry; Fashionable Intelligence; Personal Chit Chat; Amusing Cartoons on the Follies and Foibles of the day; Sparks of Mirth, etc., etc. FRANK LESLIE'S LADY'S JOURNAL is the most beautiful of all the ladies' papers. It should be found on the table of every lady in the land. Price 10 cents a copy; annual subscription, $4, postpaid.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly has made rapid strides as the rival of many aspirants to public favors. Its contributors are some of the best living writers. Every department of literature is represented in its columns. The amount of instruction, entertainment and amusement afforded by the articles, essays, stories, and general miscellany contained in the 128 quarto pages of each number of this publication has been well appreciated. Every copy of the POPULAR MONTHLY is embellished with over 100 beautiful illustrations. Being the cheapest periodical of the kind in existence, and at the same time one of the most select and universally welcome, it must continue, to increase in public favor, and rank with the publisher's SUNDAY MAGAZINE—the highest among all our American monthlies It is published on the 14th of each month. Price, 25 cents a number; Subscription $3, postpaid, per year. Address your orders to Frank Leslie, 537 Pearl Street, New York

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine is a beautiful work. It will interest educated and cultivated minds as well as the most ordinary reader. It is the only Sunday magazine published in this country. Every number has 128 pages fill with the most select and fascinating literature ranging from the Sermon by the Editor (Dr. C. Deems, pastor of the Church of the Strangers), to stirring Tales, general Topics and Essays, Poetry, Music, Fun, Science, History, etc., in great variety. Each copy of this Magazine has 100 exquisite engravings of the most interesting character. It has reached a circulation and prosperity such as make it one of the marvels of periodical literature. It is indeed a beautiful work. Buy it and see for yourselves. Single copies are only 25 cents, and Annual Subscription Price only $3, postpaid.
