THE FIRST SNAKE STORY OF THE SLASON.

SHOHOLA FALLS, Pike county, Pa., June 19.—Jennie Wurtz, a Ger-man girl of New York city, who is summering at Shohola creek, and her cousin, Miss Wolf, went trouting in the Shohola on Tuesday last. At about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, having caught nearly one hundred having caught nearly one hundred trout, they started for home by way of "Ball Hill," a place noted for its nattlesnakes. After they had walk-ed about half a mile Miss Wurtz stepped upon an object that moved Harrisburg Patriot says: "Mr. Hayes has no knowledge whatever and threw her down. Regaining of the frauds by which he was elevaher feet she saw two large rattle-snakes crawling into the rocks and guiltless. He just stepped innounderbrush. She had stepped upon one of them. With a stick that she pointments around indiscriminately seized, Miss Wolf cut one rattle- without intending them for anybody snake in two. Miss Wurtz struck at in particular, and if by some unacanother, but missed it. The snake countable coincidence they happenthat Miss Wolf killed was five and ed to hit the very men who did a half feet in length and had thirty- dirty work, why bless his innocent two rattles. The girls took the rat- soul, he can't help that-he never intles and continued on their way to tended that they should ! How can the summit of "Ball Hill." Here anybody suspect Mr. Hayes of such while resting they heard frequent a thing. and distinct rattles from the foot of the hill. They walked to the edge of the summit and saw that the rocks beneath them were covered with rattlesnakes. Gathering together a pile of stones they threw them in quick succession among the reptiles. Ten minutes later not a live snake was visible. The guils descended, and found ninety-eight dead snakes, measuring from two and a half to six feet iu length, and with from three to thirty-seven rat-tles. Tying a string to two of the largest and dragging them along, the girls reached home at about dusk. remaining ninety-six .- N. Y. Sun | end. of 18th.
