Edward's Temptation.

BY HIRATO ALGER, JR. It was six o'clock in the afternoon. At this time the great wholesale warehouse of Messrs. Hubbard & Son was went to close, unless the pressure of business compelled the partners to keep open until later.

But Mary Jones-Edward's sister -grew sick. She had taken a severe cold which terminated in a fever. This not only cut off the income arising from her own labor, but also prevented her mother from accomplishing as much as she would otherwise have been able to do.

On the morning of the day on which our story commences, Mary had expressed a longing for an orange. In her fever it would have been most grateful to her.

It is hard indeed when we are obliged to deny to those we love that which would be a refreshment and a benefit to them.

Mrs. Jones felt this, and so did Edward.

"I only wish I could buy you one, Mary," said Edward, just as he set out for the store. "Next year I shall receive a larger salary, and then we shan't have to pinch so much," "Never mind, Edward," said Mary, smi'ing faintly, "I ought not to have asked for it, knowing how along without me."

"Don't trouble yourself about that, Mary," said Mrs. Jones, soothingly, though ber heart sank within her at the thought of her empty larder. "Only get well, and we shall get along well enough after-

It was with the memory of this scene that Edward went to the store in the morning.

All around him were boxes of of dollars in money.

"Oh !" thought he, "if only I had much good it would do poor Mary!" and Edward sighed.

The long day wore away at last, and Edward was then about to close the warehouse. But as he was passing the desk of his employer, his attention was drawn to a bit of paper lying on the floor beneath. Hepicked it up, and to his great joy he found it to be a ten dollar bill.

The first thought that flashed upon him was "How much good will this do Mary. I can buy ffer the oranges she wants, and she shall have some every day, and perhaps she would like a chieken."

But a moment later his countenance felt.

"It isn't mine," he sighed. "It must be Mr. Habbard's. This is his desk, and he must have dropped

"Still," urged the tempter, "he will never know it. And after all, what are ten dollars to him? He is worth a hundred thousand."

KILLED IN A CHURCH.

The Panic at a Revival Meeting in Lynchburg. A list of the Dead.

LYNCHBURG, Va., Oct. 17th. The following are the particulars of the church panic last night : A great crowd had assembled in the colored Baptist Church on Court street to witness a marriage ceremony, the contracting parties being ceremony had been performed and the bridal party had left the church when the services of a revival meeting, which has been going on for some time were resumed. The mourners were at the altar, and the pastor was exhorting when an alarm, caused, it is said, by the falling of some plastering, was raised that the house was falling. Instantly the congregation, which was dense, was thrown into a panic and There was a general rush to the doors and windows. The audienceroom being in the second story those who first reached the head of the stairs were so pressed on by the panic stricken crowd that they were thrown down, and those who followed shared the same fate, until they rushing over it careless of everything so they made their escape. The consequences were terrible. Many were either trampled or smothered to death or badly wounded. Some who were near the bottom say they had to bear a weight which every moment seemed as though it would squeeze the life out of them.
