

Facts for the Curious.

The greyhound runs by eyesight only, and this we observe as a fact. The carrier-pigeon flies his two hundred and fifty miles homeward by sight—namely, from point to point of objects which he has marked; but this is only our conjecture. The fierce dragon-fly, with twelve thousand lenses in his eyes, darts from angle to angle with the rapidity of a flashing sword, and as rapidly darts back, not turning in the air, but with a dash reversing the action of his four wings, and instantaneously calculating the distance of the objects, or he would dash himself to pieces. But in what conformation of the eye does this consist? No one can answer.

A cloud of ten thousand gnats dance up and down in the sun, the minutest interval between them, yet no one knocks another heading upon the grass, or breaks a leg or wing, long and delicate as they are. Suddenly, amidst your admiration of this matchless dance, a peculiarly high-shouldered, vicious gnat, with long, pendant nose, darts out of the rising and falling cloud, and settling on your cheek, inserts a poisonous sting. What possessed the little wretch to do this? No one knows.

A carriage comes suddenly upon all flock of geese on a narrow road, and drives straight through the middle of them. A goose was never yet fairly run over, nor a duck.—They are under the very wheels and hoofs, and yet somehow they contrive to flap and waddle off. Habitually stupid, heavy and indolent, they are nevertheless equal to any emergency.

Why does the lonely woodpecker, when he descends his tree and goes to drink, stop several times on his way, listen and look round, before he takes his draught? No one knows. How is it that the species of ants which is taken in battle by others are to be made slaves, should be black, or colored ants? No one knows.

The power of judging of actual danger, and the free and easy boldness which results from it, are by no means uncommon. Many birds seem to have a most correct notion of a gun's range, and while scrupulously careful to keep beyond it, confine their care to this caution, though the most obvious resource would be to fly right away out of sight, and hearing, which they do not choose to do. And they sometimes appear to make even an ostentatious use of their power, fairly putting their wit and cleverness in antagonism to that of man, for the benefit of their fellows. We lately read an account by a naturalist in Brazil, of an expedition he made to one of the islands of the Amazon to shoot spoon-bills, ibises, and other of the magnificent gallinular birds, which are most abundant there.—His design was completely baffled, however, by a wretched little sandpiper that preceded him, continually uttering his tell-tale cry, which at once aroused all the birds within hearing. Throughout the day did this individual bird continue his self-imposed duty of sentinel to others, effectually preventing the approach of the fowler to the game, and yet managing to keep out of the range of his gun.

The Bahama Plineapple.

A large proportion of the area of the Bahama Islands is devoted to the cultivation of fruit, of which oranges and pineapples are principal; and at the present time the fields in the estates on which the pineapples are growing form a peculiar feature in the landscape. The appearance of the broad expanse of young fruit, with its clusters of delicately tinted, but sharp and serrated leaves, rising only a short distance from the ground, and covering the undulating fields, produces a very remarkable effect. In no other branch of agriculture can so curious a picture be produced as in the growth of these vast numbers of pines. As many as a million and a half of the fruit have been collected from a single acre at one crop. The appearance of these pineapples, estates has as little in common with the sugar plantations or paddy-fields of the tropics as with the corn fields or vineyards of Europe. In a short time these pineapples will be making their appearance in the Foreign markets. They are shipped in an unripe state, and mature during the voyage, and hence are not so excellent in quality as the fine hot-house fruit, or as if they were properly ripened in the ground. The pineapples of New Providence, however, are superior to any other variety, and often attain an enormous size. One grown in Pembrokehire, weighing 10½ lbs., and measured 10½ in. in height, exclusive of stalk and crown, and 22 in in circumference, was served up at the coronation banquet of George IV., and since then the improved modes of cultivation have greatly increased the size and quality of the fruit. There is an enormous demand for the Bahama pineapples both in Europe and America and a new industry has lately sprung up in the island in preserving the fruit in tins when they are fully ripened; one factory in Nassau alone exports annually a million tins, valued at £16,000. These fruits are superior to those sent away earlier in the season, as they are ripened naturally and packed in perfect condition, instead of being gathered when only half ripe.

AGRICULTURE.

HUNGARIAN GRASS.—Comparatively few farmers raise this crop, though it is very productive and excellent for most kinds of stock, if fed in the proper manner. The time between sowing and harvesting is shorter than for any field crop raised on farms. It is useless, in this latitude, to sow it early in the season. To produce a good crop the entire growth of the plant must be taken place during very warm weather. If sown at the same time oats are sown, and will remain stunted during the entire season. The trouble some farmers have experienced with Hungarian grass has arisen mainly from allowing the grass to remain uncut till the seed was nearly or quite ripe. It should be harvested as soon as the seeds form and before they have commenced to mature. Another difficulty has arisen from the amount of dust Hungarian grass often contains. It grows on land that is recently plowed and harvested, and over the surface of which there is no soil, much dust is likely to be disturbed in raking and pitching the hay. This may be prevented very largely by cutting the grass quite high, and by gathering it when it is cured with a hand-rake instead of with a horse-rake. If gathered in this way and pitched on the cart when the ground is moist with dew nearly all the dust usually found in Hungarian hay may be avoided.

HOW TO CLEAN BRASS AND COPPER.—The following mixture will be found the best thing for cleaning brass, copper, tin, stair-rod, taps, and even windows, and it is quite worth the trouble of making once a year, as quantity is given will last the time, and the best way is to store it in a wide-mouthed pickle jar of glass or stone: 1 pound whitening, 1 pound rotten stone, 1 pound of soft soap, 1 teacupful vinegar, as much water as will make it a thick paste. Let it boil fully ten minutes, and when nearly cold add the spirits of turpentine. When you use it put very little on a rag rub the article you wish to clean well with it until it becomes bright, and then polish with a leather dipped in powdered Bath Brick. Unless you use Bath Brick it soon tarnishes, but Bath Brick preserves the polish.

KEEPING FISH FRESH WITH SUGAR.—A method adopted in Portugal for preserving fish consists in removing the viscera and sprinkling sugar over the interior, keeping the fish in a horizontal position, so that the sugar may penetrate as much as possible. It is said that fish prepared in this way can be kept completely fresh for a long time, the flavor being a perfect one. The fish is packed in a wooden box, and treated before salting and smoking possess a much more agreeable taste, a tablespoonful of sugar being sufficient for a five pound fish.

COMPOST ORANGES.—Put a handful of loam to soil with a gill of water in a saucepan; boil for five minutes, and strain through a cloth. The water is to be used for watering plants, and the soil is to be used for sowing seeds. The water is to be used for watering plants, and the soil is to be used for sowing seeds.

REPAIRS IN ROADS AND PATHS.—It should be remembered that the worst spot in a piece of road, whether public or private way, measures the capacity of the team for hauling loads over it, or in other words, a team can draw between two given points only what can be hauled over the worst spot. When it is a steep hill or a muddy slough, no matter how perfect the other portions of the way may be. Any man would be considered a fool who should keep a good pair of horses for hauling loads and then persist in using them on a one-horse wagon, drawing but a half load at a time, and yet that is just what many do. It is better to have a good pair of horses, and haul a full load, than to have a one-horse wagon, and haul a half load.

HOW TO MANAGE A YOUNG BULL.—To make a first class animal he should run with the cow till he is six months old at least. If weaned earlier, feed on new milk just from the cow three times a day till he is six months old, then twice a day till he is eight months, then once a day till he is a month or so longer. At an early day, say a month old, give him a little fine hay to pull at, and later let him have some oatmeal, a little oil-cake, vegetables, etc., increasing the rations gradually as he grows older. Weaning from milk should be gradual and in pasture ground. He should be at eight months and handle him from that time on daily. After he is weaned, feed as you would other cattle to keep them in the best condition. Do not handle the ring after it is put in until the wound is entirely healed, and rub on his nose some mutton tallow twice a day.

SORE THROAT, COUGH, COLIC, and similar troubles, if suffered to progress, result in serious Pulmonary Affections, often times incurable. "Brown's Bronchial Tonic" is the best remedy for the cure of the disease, and give almost instant relief.

A DISCOVERY ABOUT CORN.—An exchange tells of a man who plants two or three weeks after the crop is planted, a new silk every fifteen or twenty days, each way. And this is the reason: If the weather becomes dry after the filling time, the silk and tassels both become dry and dead. In this condition, if it should become seasonable, the silk renews and renews its growth, but the tassels do not recover. The reason for this is, the new silk is unable to fill the office for which it was designed. The pollen from the replanted corn is then ready to supply silk, and the filling is completed. He says nearly all the abortive ears so common in corn crops, are caused by the want of pollen, and he has known ears to double their size in this filling.

It is said that six bushels of peas are equal to ten bushels of corn for fattening hogs, and that peas yield a larger number of bushels per acre than corn.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS produce diarrhoea or constipation, and a torpid condition of the liver, resulting in general debility and inertness of mind. To overcome this prostration, appeal is again made to the liquor as a stimulant, only to increase the gastric disturbance. The judicious application of such a tonic as Simmonds' Liver Regulator would strike at the very root of the evil by correcting the condition of the liver, exciting the bowels to action, or correcting their looseness, stimulating the kidneys and removing the feelings of general depression, and with it the craving for liquor.

This is to certify that I suffered with the Gastritis for four months, and could not be relieved until I procured Dr. Simmonds' Liver Regulator, and was entirely cured in a short time.—E. T. THORNTON, Coman's Well, Va.

DOMESTIC.

OSTIONS.—From our own experience, and the observation of others, we can fully endorse the testimony of the St. Louis Miller, on the healthful properties of the above esculent. Lung and liver complaints are certainly benefited, often cured, by a free consumption of oysters; either raw, or stewed in a Colds yield to them like magic. Don't be afraid of them. Taken at night all of offense will be wanting by morning, and the good effects will amply compensate for the trifling annoyance. Taken regularly they greatly promote the health of the lungs and the digestive organs. An extract made by boiling down the juice of oysters to a syrup, and taken as a medicine, answers the purpose very well, but tried, roasted or boiled, oysters are better. Oysters are a very cheap medicine, within everybody's reach, and they are not by any means as "bad to take" as the costly nostrums a neglect of their use may necessitate.

WIT AND HUMOR.

Too much whiskey had a very bad effect upon a man's bump of locality. A few days ago a speculator staggered across New street, opposite the Stock Exchange, and accosted a broker, saying: "Say, Mister, which is the other side of the way?" "Over there, of course," was the reply, as the astonished broker pointed to the opposite side of the street. "The deuce!" ejaculated the tipsy fellow, "I was—I told me a moment ago, when I was on that side, that it was over here. But I always said that he couldn't tell the truth."

"And—and—" "And the protest will cost you twelve shillings. I cease put it in the bank. Good morning, sir!"
