DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL TICKET,

FOR PRESIDENT, GEN. WINFIELD S. HANCOCK. Of Pennsylvania. FOR VICE PRESIDENT, HON. WM. H. ENGLISH, Of Indiano.

STATE TICKET. SUPREME JUDGE,

GEORGE A. JENKS, Jefferson Co, AUDITOR GENERAL, ROBERT P.DECHERT, Philadelphia.

The nomination of Hancock and English is received all over the country with the most unbounded enthusiasm. Hancock's nomination unfies the party his election will unify the country. Everywhere the party is inspired with the highest hopes of success and there is a universal will to labor incessantly for the triumph of a cause so noble and men so deservedly beloved. The inbications strongly point to the success of the Democratic party and the overthrow of Cameranism in Pennsylvania.

A paragraph goes the rounds of the press to the effect that Gen. Beaver, of Bellefonte, was offered the nomination for Vice President, by the Chicago convention, but declined, having in liview the next Governorship, of this state. May be.;

OUR CANDIDATES.

(Condensed from the Times White House Gal.) Ger. Winfield Scott Hancock, of Penn-

THE PUBLIC SERVICE OF THE GREAT SOLDIER Few men have served their country better than Winfield S. Hancock, and few deserve more from their countrymen. A big man, with a big head, a big heart and a big brain, Hancock is the very personification of honor, honesty and capacity. Gallant and unassuming, a soldjer in three wars, the here of a hundred battles, he is a man on whom all democrats can consistently unite for President, and who, as a candidate, will command a larger degree of respect and support from republicans than any other man in the democratic party. Clear-headed and self-peliant, his career as a judicial statesman and military governor while in command of Lousiana and Texas, gives evidence that if a strong man is needed for president, there is no man in the nation more fit for that position than Winfield S. Hancock. With him as the candidate of the party the democrats will nave nothing to explain or defend and can proudly point to his record and challenge a comparison of it with that of the republican candidate. STAPESMAN.

Winfield Scott Hancock was born in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, February 14, 1824, and is therefore fifty-six years of age. At the age of sixteen Hancock was sent to West Point and had for classmates U. S. Grant, Geo. B. McClellan, J. F. Raynolds, J. L. Reno, Burnside, Franklin and W. F. Smith. He graduated in 1844, June 30, and in 1845-5 served with his regiment in the Indian territory as a second ileatenant of the Sixth infantry. In 1847 we find him in Mexico and conspicuous for gallantry at the Natural Bridge, San Antonia, Contreras, Cherubusco, Molino del Rey and the capture of the city of Mexico. He was breveted for gallantry at the battles of Contreras and Cherubusco. In 1849 and 1850 he served with his regiment. A YOUNG PENNSYLVANIAN. useo. useo. In 1849 and 1850 he served with his regiment as quariermaster and adjutant, and in the fall of 1850 was married at St. Louis to Miss Almira Russel, the dau ghter of a prominent merchant of that city. He took part in several Indian campaigns in the west, and in 1857 was engaged in the Southern Florida war. He served in the expedition against Utah and in 1859 went to California.

When he heard of the rebellion he took high ground in favor of the Union and did much in 1861 to check the secession spirit then seizing upon California. He applied to Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, for a commission in the volunteers, but the governor being slow in replying to his application he obtained a leave of absence and came east. His garnestness impressed Gen. Scott, who ordered him to report to General M'Clellan President Lincoln, on the 23d of September, 1861, commissioned Hancock a brigadier general of volunteers. He was assigned to a brigade in the division of Gen. Baldy Smith and reported for daty at Chain Bridge, Virginia, in the Army of the Potomac.

His first battle in the rebellion was at War wick Court House, near Yorktown, and he led his brigage in person, driving the enemy be-fore him. At Williamsburg Hancock bore a conspicuous part. The action of Hancock had rendered Williamsburg untenable, and that night the enemy abandoned it. Hancock's name was heralded from Maine to California, and in a few hours, from an unknown subor-dinate, he had leaped into fame and assumed a national reputation. M'Clellan telegraphed he president, "Haneock was superb to-day, n expression which all who saw him towering bove his men leading them to battle knew to e only just. For his services in the Peninsular campaign Gen. M'Clellan recommended Hancock for pro-motion to the rank of major general of volun-teers and the brevets of major, lieutenant colnel in the regular army. ALWAYS AT IT. In September, 1862, Hancock commanded his brigade in the battle of South Mountain and afterwards at Antietam. In this latter engagement, when Gen. Richardson fell, Hancock was sent to take command of that gallant officer's division. In November, 1862, Hancock received his commission as major general and on the his commission as major general, and on the 13th of December was engaged in the desperate and bloody assault on Mayre's Heights. His beand bloody assault on Mayre's Heights. His be havior on this occasion was in keeping with the high reputation he had achieved. In this bettl Hancock lost the half of his command, killer and wounded, and all his aids were wounded. At Chancellorsville, in May, 1863, he commanded his division and covered the road leading towards Fredericksburg, where, amis surrounding disaster, although constantly at facked his troops manufained their position to tacked, his troops maintained their position to the last, and formed the rear guard of the army in moving off the field. The general had he horse shot under him in the battle. Early in June he relieved General Couch in command of the second corps, and latter in the same month was assigned by Mr. Lincoln to be its It was at Gettysburg Hancock again doomed before the country as a hero. Of Gen. Han ek's individual action at Gettysburg it would quire a volume to tell. His was really the ac require a volume to tell. His was really the action of the army, and Round Top, Culp's Hill and Cemetery Heights were his creations. He sent word to General Meade that was the place to fight, and seizing the favorable positions. to fight, and seizing the favorable positions, with the eye of a consummate general, hung on to them with the advance until Meade brought up the whole army and delivered his battle.

Hancock was riding the storm of battle as if he bore a charmed life. At last, just in the moment of victory, he was seen to reel in his saddle and would have fallen to the ground had he not been helped from his horse. A bull had pierced his thigh, and for a time it was thought the wound was mortal.

"Tell Gen. Meade." said Hancock, addressing his aide, Col. Mitchell, "that the troops under ny command have repulsed the enemy and gained a great victory. The campy are now flying in all directions in my front."

When the aide delivered this message to Gen. Meade and added his general was dangerously wounded, Meade said: "Say to Gen. Hancock to the control of the control of Meade and added his general was dangerously wounded, Meade said: "Say to Gen. Hancock that I am sorry he is wounded and that I thank him for myself and for the country for the services he has rendered to day."

Gen. Meade afterwards, in commenting on the battle of Gettysburg, said to Gen. R. C. Drum: "No commanding general ever had a better dentenant than Hancock. He was always faithful and reliable."

UNITER GRANT. Hancock did not recover from his wound un Hancock did not recover from his wound until December, 1863, when, although still quite lane, he reported for duty, and was sent north to recruit his corps. He was tendered a reception at Independence hall by the citizens of Philadelphia, and received the hospitilities of the cities of Boston. Albany and New York. In March, 1864, he rejoined his corps and participated in the battles of the Wilderness with Grant. He tought the battle of Boydton road capturing 1,000 prisoners and two stands of colors.

With the battle of Boydton Gen. Hancock's active fighting in the war ceased. President Lincoln, who had learned to place 4 high estimate on Hapcock's abilities, ordered him to Washington, and directed him at once to proceed with and organize an army of 50,000 veterans from discharged volunteers who had served an enlistment. The use of this army was alone prevented by the surrender of Lee and the endng of the war. At the close of the war Han ock commanded the army of the Shenandoah elieving Gen. Sheridan. This army consisted of 35,000 mcn of all arms, and was destined to move south with Hancock's 50,000 veterans and join Gen. Sherman, but Joe Johnson threw up the sponge and rendered the movement unnec-essary.

SINCE THE WAR.

Gen. Hancock's career since the war is so well known it needs but little mention here. For his services during the war he was appointed a brigadier and afterwards a major general in the brigadier and afterwards a major general in the regular army and assigned the command of the middle department. In 1866 he took command of the department of Missouri and conducted two campaigns against hostile Indians, taking the field in person at the head of 1,500 men of all arms. In 1867 he was sent by the president to New Orleans to command the states of Texas and Louisiana. It was in this field of labor that he distinguished himself by setting the yearnoless. and Louisiana. It was in this field of labor that he distinguished himself by setting the example of an officer of the army with extraordinary powers strenuously insisting upon the entire subordination of military to civil authority in time of peace. Among the military commanders during the reconstruction period he was conspicuous in this regard, and the conditions then laid down in his general orders and correspond to the conditions then laid down in his general orders and corresponding the conditions that the conditions there are distinguished the conditions that the conditions there are distinguished the conditions that the conditions there are distinguished the conditions that the conditions the conditions the conditions that the conditions that the conditions the conditions that the conditions that the conditions that the conditions the conditions the conditions that the conditions the conditions that the conditions that the conditions the conditions that the conditions the conditions that the conditions that the conditions that the conditions the conditions that t then laid down in his general orders and correspondence did more perhaps than anything else to make him the ideal soldier in the minds of the constitutional democrats. In 1868 he was relieved at his own request, and in 1869, 170, 71 and '72 commanded the department of Dakota. Since then he has commanded the military division of the Atlantic, composed of the department of the lakes, the department of the east and department of Washington, with headquar, ters at Governor's Island, New York City.

PIS PERSONAL APPEARANCE.

Honcock, in personal appearance, is tall, well formed and very handsome. His height cannot be less than six feet two inches, and he weights fully two hundred and forty pounds. He would make the fidest looking president who ever sat in the White House, except, possibly, George Washington. His form towers above other men and he attracts attention by his mere looks wherever he goes. His eyes are blue and have a benignant and mild expression when in repose, but inspiring when in danger. His manner is dignified and knightly and he is courtesy himself. He is always magnetic, and draws men to him by his kindliness and draws men to him by his kindliness and draws men to self. He is always magnetic, and draws men to him by his kindliness and gentle interest in their affairs.

General Hancock had two children, Russell General Hancock had two children, Russell Hancock and Ida Elizabeth Hancock. The latter died in New York, of typhoid fever, when 18 years of age. She was a young lady of great promise. Russell Hancock, the general's only son, is living and is a planter in Mississippi.

A volume would not contain an account of all the heroic deeds of a man like Hancock; his is a noble character, and it is a pleasure to write of such a man. A glorious soldier, a steadfast iriend, a useful citizen, he is all that is noble, manly and brave in poor fallen humanity.

ident, will be given in our next.)

The Harrisburg Patriot is decidedly at the head of Democratic papers in the state, and we hope it may have a wide circulation during the campaign just opening. The objective point next to the election of Gen. Hancock to the Presidency is to redeem the old Keystone and place her once more into the Democratic column, and one way to do this is to spread sound political doctrine. The club rates of the Patriot are so low as to be within the reach of all. Read the prospectus in another TUTEN is getting to be mighty big feeling and selfish, or else extremely hard to "govern." Why the man is impudent enough to want a President and Vice President all for his own use. In last week's Republican he gives the portraits of two chaps and calls them "Our next President and Vice President," and what is worse he displays very poor taste in the selection of his rulers. The first is a good enough looking fellow and would no doubt make a good commercial agent or something of that sort, but the other-Ugh! He looks very sour and surly and 24-3t would seem to be well adapted to superintend a state's prison or some such institution. Try again Edward, you can surely do better than that.

-Garfield Anxious About Cameron.

Wash'ton Tel, to Cincinnati Commercial, Rep. The friends of General Garfield, as well as the General himself, are said to be exceedingly anxious Senator Cameron should accept the chairmanship of the national Republican committee, for the reason, as freely stated that without the cordial cooperation of Mr. Comeron and his triend in Pennsylvania that state must be placed in the list of doubtful States. -0.0

New merits and virtues are now daily discovered in the character and career of Mr. Garfield, by the Republican press. Some of our fellows just the other day discovered that he is a statesman. Whew! who would have thunk it just a few weeks ago.

A Negro's Desperation.

RICHMOND, Va., June 21 .- Last night, at about 11 o'clock, a negro named William Burke in a supposed fit of jealousy shot Pat Harris, also colored, in the mouth. He then locked himself up in his house with his wife, and armed with a loaded musket, defied arrest, threatening to kill anyone who attempted to enter. The police surrounded the house and proceeded to break in. A panel was knocked out of the door, through which Burke's wife tried to make her exit from the house. but before she had succeeded her husband struck her over the head with the musket, crushing in her skull and scattering her brains. The police then entered and secured the mnrderer. While all this was going on a large crowd of negroes gathered, and when they learned that Burke had killed his wife the excitement became intense, and an effort was made to take him from the police and hang him, but the officers kept the crowd off and took their prisoner to the station house.
