DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT, GEN. WINFIELD S. HANCOCK, Of Pennsylvania.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT, HON. WM. H. ENGLISH, Of Indiana.

STATE TICKET. SUPREME JUDGE, GEORGE A. JENKS, Jefferson Co.

AUDITOR GENERAL, ROBERT P. DECHERT, Philadelphia.

WHAT HANCOCK'S CANDIDACY MEANS.

Senator Pendleton, of Ohio. Hancock's candidacy means peace, a true fraternal Union, obedience to the Constitution with all its amendments, a government and a country beneficent alike to all its people, and beloved by all alike, a cessation of fraternal strife, a cessation of sectional difficulties, a cessation of the era of construction and reconstruction, attention to the measures of administration so as to perform, either by action or non action that duty which has always been so dear to the Democratic party, of exalting the individual and redressing all the wrongs which law or lawlessness has inflicted on him. It means peace at the polls without the presence of an army to preserve it! means a free ballot to every citizen, white and colored, native and naturalized, without marshals to intimidate him; means free elections, fair counts, peaceful inaugurations; it means to reverse the ways of the Republican party, to uncover its corruptions, to rectify its errors and to restore to the government the simplicity, the honesty, the dignity of the Farmer-Republic which our fathers created. It means in one word, to garner and to gather, and to combine the blessings of that Union which Hancock saved at Gettysburg, and of that civil liberty which he established at New Orleans. And, as his candidacy means the hope of this blessed change, so his election would secure its full fruition.

The Next President Officially Notified of His Nomination.

New York, July 18th, 1880.—The steamer Fletcher having on board members of the committee of the Democratic National Convention, some members of the Democratic National Committee, quite a number of members of the Democratic congressional campaign committee and many prominent politicians, landed at Governor's Island at 1:40 p. m. The party proceeded to the General's residence and upon being ushered into the parlors, General Hancock, addressing Gen. Hancock, said:

Gen. Hancock's Remarks.

Gen. Hancock: I have the honor to introduce to you, Stevenson, chairman of the National Convention, and the members of the committee of the Democratic National Convention, assembled at Cincinnati. I have also the honor of presenting to you the committee appointed by your convention to receive the nomination of your countrymen to the highest office in the gift of the people. It is a source of great satisfaction to the committee in making their announcement to you, to say that your nomination was not secured by the solicitation of personal or political friends, but was the spontaneous action of that convention, actuated by patriotic duty. One of the ablest and wisest of your countrymen, your fellow citizen, has given you this nomination with perfect unanimity and with a confidence that continues to grow as you are better known to the people of this country, and with one accord they ratify the action of that convention. So we are bound to believe as we believe in your election as an accomplished fact. We cannot doubt it, and we believe that when the election is over the great people of America will be glad to have the inheritance of this people and all the good things that are in the name of the Democratic party, by virtue of the power entrusted to this committee by the convention, its chairman I have the honor to hand to the secretary a communication in writing informing you officially of your nomination.

General Hancock then handed to the secretary of the committee, Mr. Bell, the address of the committee, after which it was handed to Gen. Hancock.

Gen. Hancock's Speech.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE.—I appreciate the honor and confidence which you have conferred upon me by your nomination to the highest office in the gift of the people. I have the honor to hand to the secretary a communication in writing informing you officially of your nomination.

Those present were introduced to Gen. Hancock, who had a few words of welcome for each of them. After about ten minutes spent in hand-shaking General Hancock, to Hon. Wm. H. English, said:

"The Cincinnati convention, with a unanimity unparalleled, appointed us a committee to wait upon you in person and inform you in writing of the nomination of the Democratic party to the highest office in the gift of the people. I have the honor to hand to the secretary a communication in writing informing you officially of your nomination.

Remarks of Mr. English.

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION.—As a practical business man not much accustomed to the induction of action or circumlocution of speech, I will say plainly in a few words that I accept the high trust which you have tendered me with feelings of profound gratitude, and that I will at an early date formally and in writing make the acceptance of such a high and important office as this to be our political foes from all parts of the land, our political enemies in all the States, and our political opponents in all the nations. I will not say that I am not a man of high ability, but I will say that I am a man of high integrity, and that I will do my duty to the best of my ability, and I will do it with a clear conscience and a pure heart.

But these are great occasions when the discharge of a man's duties is to be considered above all personal considerations, and I shall not disregard the unanimous voice of the representatives of a majority of the American people for whom you speak to-day. [Applause.]

I can only say that I am glad to have the honor which has been conferred upon me, and I will do my duty to the best of my ability, and I will do it with a clear conscience and a pure heart.

The speaker was applauded at the close of his remarks and then followed another general hand-shaking, after which the party again boarded the steamer and left the island.

The grandson of Gen. Hancock lay dead in the house at the time, hence the ceremony was necessarily shortened. When the committee started for Governor's Island they did not know of the General's sad bereavement.

MRS. HANCOCK.

Personal Characteristics of the Wife of the Democratic Candidate for President.

From the New York Graphic. Mrs. Hancock, the wife of the General, is a few years his junior in age and as a woman is imposing in appearance as he is as a man. Tall and well proportioned, with a most winsome smile, a manner that puts you at your ease at once and a pair of eyes that animate every line of a handsome face, she is still a beauty, although her hair is becoming streaked with gray.

She was married when the General was but a young lieutenant doing duty in the far West. It was entirely a love match, and neither of them have since regretted it—in fact, their home is one of the happiest imaginable. Mrs. Hancock has always been opposed to her husband's becoming a candidate for the Presidency, and she is even above the weakness of wishing to be the mistress of the White House. She dreads the worry of the canvass, and if her husband is elected she thinks that for the honor which the position brings will be dearly purchased by the renunciation of all domestic life for four years to come and of his position as senior major general and his chances of soon becoming chief of the army. While she prefers her own home existence, however, there is no one better qualified to play the hostess on a grand scale than she. A society belle, even after her marriage, she has all the self-confidence and resources needed to entertain the most varied company. There is nothing in the range of conversation about which she does not know something. Her greatest charm, however, is—and it is the General's also—the art of making every individual atom feel as if he were the one sole object of her attentions.

Washington Letter.

Washington D. C. July 17th 1880.

Though Republican papers are not usually free in their expressions of opinions concerning the head of their ticket, it must be admitted that the least of them speak unreservedly in condemnation of parts of General Garfield's letter of acceptance. The party "platform" being nothing but a string of platitudes, these papers had naturally looked to the candidate's letter for a statement of principles instead of which they find, so they say, evasions and still more platitudes. Only the blind party papers, commend the letter unreservedly, and they would have commended it if Garfield had simply sent out as his acceptance, the ten commandments, reversed.

General Hancock's letter is not yet published, but since Garfield's has fallen so flat, it is looked for with special interest. We may be sure in advance, that if it goes beyond mere formal acceptance, it will state exactly what the General believes, therein differing from Garfield's. We know it will condemn sectionalism, therein being the opposite of Garfield's and that he will follow, the Democratic platform in denouncing centralization, and will assert that States of the Union should have at least such "home rule" as that which portions of monarchies every where are clamoring for. It will indicate the difference between a time of war, and a time of peace, giving preference to the letter. But the General, knowing that all intelligent Americans understand his position and that of the party on those subjects, and others of importance, may confine himself to acceptance of a nomination given him with the greater heartiness because, indeed, his opinions were so well known. At any rate, the letter will be written to state something clearly, and Garfield's was not.

The two duties of the administration just now seem to be the collection of per centages from government employees for the benefit of the radical campaign fund and arrangement of a programme for active participations by Mr. Hayes, and his cabinet in the effort to elect Garfield. If money enough can be wrangled from these people, and other amounts can be bargained for from the capitalists of the East, we shall have the most profligate radical campaign ever known.

CARROLL.

HANCOCK'S LOUISIANA ORDER.

What Judge Black Thought and Said at the Time.

On a recent occasion, I read your admirable order. I am much engaged, but I cannot resist the temptation to steal time enough from my clients to tell you how grateful you have made me by your patriotic and noble behavior. Yours is the first, most distinct and most emphatic recognition which the principles of American liberty has received at the hands of any high officer in a southern command. It has the very ring of the revolutionary metal. Washington never said a thing in better taste or better time. It will prove to all men that "Peace hath her victories not less renowned than those of war." I congratulate you not because it will make you the most popular man in America (for I dare say you are nothing about that), but because it will give you through all time the solid reputation of a true patriot and a sincere lover of your country, its laws and its government. This, added to your brilliant achievements as a soldier, will leave you without a rival in the affections of all those whose good will is worth having, and give you a place in history which your children will be proud of.

This acknowledgment from me does not amount to much, but I am expressing truly the feelings of millions, and expressing them freely at that.

With profound respect I am yours, etc., J. S. BLACK.

To Major General Hancock.

ANTICIPATING THE RESULT.—If Hancock and English will certainly receive the 138 electoral votes of the southern States, they will also probably get the votes of the following northern and western States:

Table with 3 columns: State, Votes, Total. Connecticut 6, Indiana 15, New York 35, California 6, New Jersey 9, Oregon 3, Pennsylvania 29, Southern States 138, Total 241.

This would leave to the Republican candidates 123 votes, giving the Democrats a majority of 113.

Nobody need borrow any trouble about the way of counting these votes. They will be counted by the two houses of Congress, according to the constitution. No electoral commission will interfere.—N. Y. Sun.

RUSSELL HANCOCK, the candidate's son, was not more than twenty years old when he married Miss May Wynne, one of the belles of Louisville. Miss Wynne's father, an ex-Confederate, opposed the marriage on the ground that young Hancock was the son of "a Yankee general." Young Hancock ferried his bride over the Ohio one night eight years ago and they were married on the Indiana shore. The step old father gave in after the elopement. Neither General nor Mrs. Hancock knew of the affair for several months.
