Mother Robin Calls a New Mate.

A friend of nine has a robin's nest that he guards with very great care,

"There is a romance," he says, as he shows you the nest, "about this, and if you want to hear it, I will tell it to

"It was a good many years ago," my friend begins, "that this nest was made. There came one morning early in April two robins to tue big fir-tree in front hoboled a out upon it in a very lively one-Mr Robin, I call aim-that fixed upon the precise place for the nest. For he whetted his bill upon a bough upon it with one foot and the other, athough trying its strength, and at last he flew up to Mrs Robin, who was standing on the limb above looking at him. My window was open, and I heard him preping the gentlest little song to her that you can imagine. Then she jumped down upon the limb, rubbed her bill upon it, and danced, while he looked at her, and after she had done these things she sang the little melody. After that they flew away with great speed, and the next that I saw of them they were working with might and main, bringing twigs, moss, twine, and all sorts of things, until at last they had the nest ma le.

Now my friend, when he gets so far in his story, always stops a moment and laughs, thoughyou cannot see any thingto lauga at. But he looks closely at you, and just as soon as he observes the surprise that your eyes snow, he says: "I ought to say right here that my mother had a very choice piece of lace, a collar or something of that sort, that was washed and put out upon a little bush that very day that Mr and Mrs Robin decided to build the nest in the fir-tree. A great fuss was made that evening because the lace collar could not be found, and mother wanted the police called, so that the thief might be arrested and the collar got back, for great many dollars. But the police never found the thirf.

"Now I will go on with my story," always continues my triend, and he generally takes the nest in his hands at this time. "Well, after this nestthis is the very one I hold in my hand -was built, you never saw a more attentive lover than this Mr Robin. He would hop about with his club-toot, and seem to put his eye right upon an angle worm's cave every time he flew down to the ground, and you might see him from early morning to sunset flying back and forth with his mouth full of good things for Mrs Robin, and he would feed her as she sat upon the

"One day he seemed specially excited fore, and I could see from my window the cause of his joy. Four yellow mouths were put up to receive the dainties he had brought, and then I knew the little robins had come. Well, old Mr Robin was so excited that he did not see our cat stealthily coming, as he was pulling away at a very long angle-worm. Pussy had him in her mouth before he could give a warning cry, and the last I saw of Mr Roblis was the club foot that hung out of puss's mouth.

"By and by Mrs Robin seemed to get hungry, and I heard her uttering two strange notes that I nad never heard before, and which seemed to me to sound just as though she was saying, 'Come here! come here!' Of course and that every robin that might have heard them would have understood them as a call for help. But no robin came. It rained all that day, and poor Mrs Robin kept up that cry, and her young ones continually thrust bills from beneath her body, and opened them. I could not help them, of course, for little birds would rather

"Now I am coming to the strangest next morning was clear, and I happened to be up early. Old Mrs Robin had and cautiously made their way to the something in reply, and then the other they all went off together.

"When I looked back to the nest, Mrs not more than a minute after, the new their feathers and flew off, as kind and attentive to Mrs Robin as had been poor old club-footed Mr:"

"Now isn't this a pretty love story?" my friend inquires, and of course you say it is, and then ask him why he collar had to do with it, and he will anwser you in this way :-

flew away together, and there in the romance of the driver's life is centered bottom was my mother's lace collar, not good to wear any longer, so I have let it stay there ever since. Do you suppose young robins ever had such a suppose young robins ever had such a costly bed?"

It has been shown repeatedly by experiments that well-bred will, under favorable circumstances. produce twelve pounds of pork for a bushel of corn. These instances may not be very numerous, but they show what can be done and done without much difficulty. From a list of experiments in feeding swine made in of my window. Oas of them had, as five and three-quarter pounds of pork sure as you live, a club-foot, and he to a bushel of corn fed on the ground, and the highest an average of twenty manner, and I know that it was this one-Mr Robin, I call aim-that fixed green corn in the ear. From thirteen experiments made, the average for every bushel of corn was 10 pounds of pork. With a good breed of swine a great many times, and then he danced properly cared for, five and sixteenths pounds of corn ought so produce one pound of pork. This is a better average t an is generally obtained, but it is both possible and practicable. Instead of six pounds to the bushel-which is a fair estimate with inferior animals to consume the grain-the farmer ought not to be content with less than ten pounds. It is not difficult to calculate what one is doing in feeding corn to hogs in the way of returns. If one bushel of corn represents ten pounds of pork, and the price of pork is $3 per hundred, the farmer is receiving 30 cents per bushel for his corn, and it pork is $4 per hundred he is getting 40
