Dodgetown, a mining suburb of this city, is delirious vi h joy to-day over the discovery of Willie Heisler, a nineyear-old boy, who was lost in the wilds of the Moosic Mountains four days ago and was supposed to be dead. Willie, with his father and brother, Charlie, were out picking berries on Thursday morning, when he wandered away. The father scoured the woods all that day in vain, and a large party of his neighbors took up the search at night, with a like result. The boys mother was reported to be loosing her mind, and to reassure her some friends kept telling copious rains. How seasonable they her the boy was found and would be home shortly. Friday and Saturday hundreds of persons were out in the woods, searching eagerly for the lost impossible to say whether fish or fish- This morning a party of about five hunmany fish and eels were caught though, lad, dead or alive, and just as they were about to leave for the mountains a neighbor named Frederick Goetz came hurrying up to Heisler's house with a child whose clothing was torn to shreds, whose face was besmeared with berries and whose hands and feet Heisler.
