HANCOCK AT HOME. His Official and Domestic Habits—Penacidy His Strongest Point.

Only daughter a few years ago, a most beautiful and accomplished young lady of eighteen, it took him a long time to recover from the blow, and his wife has not yet laid aside her sombre habiliments commemorative of the sad event.

Mr. Hayes made off to California last week and don't expect to return until about Nov. 1. Some people think he had better stay at home and attend to the duties of Mr. Tilden's office, but this is a notion. The country will manage to get along just as well whether he is in Washington or California and he is sure of his $50,000 a year anyhow.

IS THE WAR OVER? (From the New York Truth: Independent, Aug. 25, 1880.) Let us suppose the case of a man who left his country in 1865, after a surrender of Appomattox.

Three candidates for President this year are none of them very rich men. Gen. Garfield is said to be worth $20,000, Gen. Hancock perhaps twice as much, while Gen. Weaver is not worth over $3,000.

Like orator Rufus, chairman Cassa has two toes to his voice. When he speaks for the public he claims the state by about 60,000 majority, while in private conversation he considers Pennsylvania a doubtful state.

What did Lincoln say at the supreme crisis of the war? "With malice toward none, and with charity toward all."

Washington Letter. WASHINGTON, D. C., AUG. 25th, 1880. General Hancock improves upon acquaintance. His first published letter to General Sherman was written in December, 1865.

DESPERATION OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY. (From the Bradford, Pa., Avoyes.) The Republican party goes into this campaign with desperation in its looks and desperation marked in its actions.

HANCOCK AT HOME. His Official and Domestic Habits—Penacidy His Strongest Point. General Hancock is seen at his best at his home, for there he throws aside the worries of his official cares and responsibilities.

VALUABLE HOME AT PRIVATE SALE. The undersigned offers at private sale his valuable home, about one mile west of Millheim, containing SEVENTEEN ACRES OF LAND.

General Hancock improves upon acquaintance. His first published letter to General Sherman was written in December, 1865, incidentally revealing the fact that he was in advance of the politicians of his party in discovering that the Electoral Commission bettered the chances of Governor Hayes, until the commission was decided on, he says, in substance, "I considered Mr. Tilden's position impregnable."

What did Lincoln say at the supreme crisis of the war? "With malice toward none, and with charity toward all." It is up North that the issues of the war are kept alive by men who made fortunes out of the distractions of their country, and would willingly see one half of the human family perish on the battlefield if their ill-gotten gains could be increased by the slaughter.
