HANCOCK'S LETTER.
He Settles the Bugbear of Rebel Claims.
General Hancock has written a letter on the matter of rebel debts, rebel claims and pensions, in answer to a letter from Hon. Theodore Cook, of Cincinnati. The General's letter is a clincher on the subject and will effectually silence all who use such weak and unbecoming arguments to influence voters. We know that such flimsy and contemptible stuff has been used in this neighborhood upon Republican soldiers who are more than half inclined to vote for Hancock. Here is the letter:

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, N. Y., September 23.—To Theodore Cook, Esq., Cincinnati, Ohio.—DEAR SIR: Your letter of the 20th inst. has been received. I regret that you are disturbed about bugbear, southern war claims. The people cannot be misled by it. To suppose that rebel claims or claims in the interest of persons who were in the rebellion can in any way or any degree be a detriment to the country, is an imputation of disloyalty such as is used to excite against Democrats, even when they were in arms defending the country, so far as it touches me, I do not care. The government can never pay a cent of such debt, pension or reward of any sort for waging war upon its own existence, nor could I be induced to approve or encourage the payment of such debt, pension or reward. No body expects or wants such unnatural action. To propose would be an insult to the intelligence and honor of our people. When the rebellion was crushed the heresy of secession in every form and in every incident went down forever. It is a thing of the dead past. We move forward, not backward. If I were president I would veto all legislation which would come before me providing for the consideration or payment of claims of any kind for losses or damages by persons who were in the rebellion, whether pensioned or not. In relation to Union war claims the government's obligations to its defenders come first. They are just and sacred. The public laws of civilized nations do not, in general, recognize claims for injuries to property resulting from the operations of war. Nevertheless our government has treated with magnanimity the claims for losses and damages suffered by Union men from military operations of the war of the Union. It has not, however, closed more than fifteen years ago, claims of that nature, now mostly in the hands of brokers or persons other than the original sufferers, and it is to my mind a disgrace that such claims should be considered as barred by the lapse of time and if hereafter entertained at all should be subject to the strictest scrutiny.

Yours very truly,
WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

ENCOURAGING NEWS FROM NEW JERSEY, NEW YORK, INDIANA AND OHIO.
(From the New York Sun, Sep. 22, 1880.)
Ex-Senator William H. Barnum, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, returned yesterday from the West. He says that Indiana will surely go Democratic in the October election, and that Ohio is not certain for the Republicans.

Mr. B. B. Smallley, member of the Democratic National Committee from Vermont, returned from his state yesterday. He said in relation to the Maine election:
"I have just returned from Vermont, and I was astonished to find the effect produced there by the news from Maine. It has greatly depressed the Republicans, and created a great deal of enthusiasm for Hancock. I do not expect, of course, that the Republican majority in Vermont will be wiped out but I am disposed to believe that the majority of September will be reduced in November."

"Is not the Plaieste vote a plurality, and will not the Legislature, being Republican, seat Davis?" the reporter asked.
"Oh I don't know about that," Mr. Smallley replied. "In the first place, the Unionists claim that a plurality elects, and Senator Blaine is apparently of the same opinion. You have read his dispatch to Governor Jewell. In that he says: 'If Governor Plaieste shall have a single vote more than Governor Davis, the Executive chair of Maine for the next two years is as well assured to him as though his majority were 10,000.' Mr. Blaine is certainly neither a careless nor an ignorant man. He unquestionably believes that a plurality elects."

Ex-Governor Bedle, of New Jersey's rooms yesterday. He said: New Jersey is sure to cast her electoral vote for Hancock and English. Ever since the Cincinnati nominations the enthusiasm among the Democracy of the state has been on the increase. The Democrats are united everywhere, and our candidates will receive many votes heretofore given to the Republican party by independent voters. Our nominee for governor is a popular man, and he is growing stronger every day. I predict a handsome Democratic majority for the national and state tickets in my state."

It would seem that the great Republican leaders are indirectly doing their level best for the election of Hancock to the Presidency. Cameron was urged to accept the chairmanship of the national committee and direct the campaign, but he was much too sick a man even to think of it. It is an open secret, though, that he takes no stock in Garfield. Blaine loses Maine in the preliminary battle, and this makes that heretofore Republican stronghold sure for Hancock. Conkling has not opened his mouth until recently, when he made a speech in New York which he must know will do Hancock more good than Garfield. He waves the bloody shirt so furiously—the tone and temper of his speech is so ultra and extreme and altogether so unseasonable, that thousands of Republicans will be driven by it into the ranks of the Democracy.

Logan, the last and least of the great Republican leaders has not been heard from at all since the campaign opened.

THE CAUSE OF REPUBLICAN ALARM.
From the New York Evening Post, Republican.
The Republicans are alarmed and uneasy at the aspect of their canvass. The result in Maine was a surprise to them because it revealed an unexpected disaffection in their own ranks. The result in Indiana and Ohio they believe to be entirely uncertain. But they have themselves to blame. The American people are not fools or blind. When they see a political party, conservative in May, wheel around to the extreme policies in September; when they see a candidate, long committed in the most positive manner to wise and national policies, suddenly and publicly abandon the conservative position which alone gave him the popular confidence and good-will, and become the ally of the extreme Bourbonism of his party, how can all this fail to shake the confidence of the voters and fill them with suspicion and disgust?

A DEMOCRATIC METHUSELAH.
Benjamin Brownfield, Aged 101 Years, Makes a Hancock Speech.
Special Dispatch to THE TIMES.
UNIONTOWN, Pa., September 20.
An interesting meeting was held by the Democrats of Monroe, Fayette county, on Saturday night. Colonel Benjamin Brownfield, a wealthy farmer, aged 101 years presided. There were six vice presidents on the platform with him, whose united ages reach 509 years. Colonel Brownfield, in opening the meeting, said:
"Providence has been very kind to me in prolonging my life, and blessing me with health and strength. I have lived to be 101 years old. This is a great age. In my earlier days I took an active part in politics. I have mingled with your fathers and grandfathers and great-grandfathers on occasions like this in days long gone in the past. I voted for Thomas Jefferson for President in 1800. We had the same question up then that we have now, whether this was a government of unlimited powers or a government of a few simple functions expressly granted by the Constitution. Mr. Jefferson contended that the great mass of the powers of our government remained with the States, while Mr. Adams and his party contended for a strong central government to override the State governments. I never missed a Presidential election. I voted for Van Buren and also for Polk, Cass, Pierce, Buchanan, Douglas, McClellan, Seymour, Greely and Tilden, and I hope to live to vote for General Hancock, and as the result of my long experience I would advise you to vote for him too.
The vice presidents were: John Trautman, 94 years; Colonel James Gardner, 80; James Snyder, 85; L. M. Clawson, 82; George Morrison, 81; and Thomas Senaas, 81.

A PEN FOR GENERAL HANCOCK.
A Presentation to the Candidate on Governor's Island—His Response.
NEW YORK, September 22.—General Hancock, on returning to Governor's Island from the city yesterday, found ex-Congressman Hooker, of Mississippi, ex-Senator M. H. Bovee, of Wisconsin, General Averill and Colonel Miller, of Pennsylvania, awaiting him. In the evening a delegation from the Phil Kearney guard, company C, Third regiment, New Jersey militia, called to present him a $50 gold pen, the gift of the guard recently held a charity fair, and the pen was to be awarded to the presidential candidate who received the most votes. Of the votes, 370 were cast for General Hancock, 370 for Garfield, and 20 for Weaver. The spokesman of the delegation was Sergeant Henry J. Stratemeyer, Jr., and the general, in returning thanks for the pen, said that he had a strong regard for the city of Elizabeth, as being the former home of General Winfield Hancock and Colonel Clark, his early commander, whose son-in-law, General Buford, he sometimes visited there. The city also recalled to mind his mother, whose name was Elizabeth.

Mr. George Neuhauer of the delegation hoped that the general would write the inaugural address with the pen. The general replied by exhibiting two turkey quills, saying that they had been presented to him for the same purpose, and in case of his election, he would use all three.

In the nomination of Messrs. Murray and Gephart for members of the legislature, our county convention did a wise act, settled an open question and established a safe precedent. There are strong reasons why our members should have at least two terms, while every argument in favor of the one term principle is based on personal or local grounds. If Centre county is famous for her great men—would maintain her high standing and prestige in the legislative councils of the state, she must not send men, however fit and worthy, every term. It requires much application and some time for any new member to become familiar with the rules and usages of the House, without a fair knowledge of which he can effect but little for or against any measure upon which he may be compelled to act. There are other reasons why our members should be permitted to acquire some experience in legislation. They should know something of the dark and wicked ways often used to defeat the will of the people and rob them of their treasure; and this they can hardly be expected to acquire if they are allowed but a single term.

Messrs. Murray & Gephart have represented their constituents faithfully and well. They fully deserve a re-nomination and re-election at the hands of the party, and an increased majority will be the fitting tribute of an appreciative people.

WASHINGTON LETTER.
Washington, D. C. Sept. 25, 1880.
"One thing which has puzzled the Republicans all through the campaign is the enormous size of Democratic meetings even in Republican strongholds. In Maine, with hardly any campaign fund, the Democratic and Greenback gatherings were almost invariably larger than those of the Republicans, though the latter have an enormous fund with which to purchase the presence of every able man or boy. The Republicans had what they thought a large meeting in this city, but almost without effort the Democracy followed with one twice as large. The truth seems to be that the people are heartily in favor of the election of General Hancock, and are glad to show their preference for him. Laborers, merchants, bankers, all get into the processions, or seen at the meetings. But the greatest of meetings was that in New York on Thursday night, at which, as the World says, the whole city turned out. I think the peculiarity mentioned as to meetings; the most significant features of the campaign.
General Hancock, in a letter defining his position on the subject of what are called "rebel claims," saying he would, if elected, veto any measure which provided any payment, reward, or pension for services against the Union. As to claims of union men for loss and damages resulting from the war, he thinks in view of the fact that hostilities ceased fifteen years ago, and that the claims have mostly fallen into the hands of speculators or brokers, they may fairly be considered as barred by lapse of time, and if hereafter entertained at all should be subjected to the strictest scrutiny. I have always thought it good policy for a party to make its platform, one for the Candidate, in accepting a nomination, to express his views upon the platform and then in peace and quietness await the result of the campaign. But Gen. Hancock has seen fit to refer to this vexed subject, and has certainly done so in a way which ought to stop forever the lying of the Radical press about "rebel claims."
Ohio Republicans in this city are being urged to go to that State, and many have already gone. The managers of the Republican campaign are in a panic about their Candidate's own State. The National Republican of yesterday morning also contained a lengthy editorial appeal for greater activity in Ohio. Our Democratic friends do not claim Ohio, but say they have a fair fighting chance for it. Every letter received by the Democratic Congressional Committee from the other October States, Indiana, Georgia and West Virginia, gives assurances of support.
