

The Order of the Golden Fleece.

The name of the Golden Fleece had a two-fold significance. It meant to typify the spirit of chivalrous adventure—of going into new lands to conquer new fame—the same spirit which actuated the Argonauts of legend, who went in search of the Golden Fleece. But there was also the religious idea. The Savior has been represented under the form of a lamb. To win His redemption by "knighthood" deeds, in the best significance of that noble word, was obviously an object of the new society of chivalry. High privileges were early conferred on the Knights of the Fleece, whose number was originally limited to thirty-one. When the Counts of Egmont and Horn were illegally executed under the reign of Philip II, on account of the stand they made for the liberties of their country, they both appealed against the sentence, alleging, among other reasons, that as Knights of the Fleece they had the right to be tried by their brother knights. After the war of the Spanish succession, which left a Bourbon on the throne of Spain, there arose a dispute between the Emperor and the King of Spain as to which of them had the right to the sovereignty of the order. The question was an extremely complicated one. The Emperor Charles VI, as heir male of the Hapsburgs, might fairly claim the knighthood as his right. On the other hand Philip of Bourbon might urge descent through an heiress—and that in Spain and the Low Countries the Salic law had never been recognized. The matter was finally arranged through treaty, the Emperor and King of Spain being recognized as joint grandmasters of the order, with equal power to name knights. The Austrian and Spanish badges of the order are almost though not quite identical in form. Each has the well-known collar of gold and flint-stones, with the typical device, "Ante ferit quoniam flammam." Though the nobler legend runs—"Pretium non vile laborum."

The Archdukes of Austria and the Infants of Spain are, as a rule, Knights of the Fleece. In later years the order has been conferred with what must be heralded as appeared undue freedom. For instance, on M. Thiers, who was not even "noble," and indeed had the sole merit of being President of the French Republic and one of the greatest men living. Then it was that political oddity called the Spanish republic, which betwixt the distinction of the little red collar ribbon and M. Thiers. The Duke of Aosta, by the way while figuring as Amadeus I. of Spain sent the Fleece to a distinguished Castilian nobleman, who returned the decoration without a word. It is a waste of words to characterize the conduct of this grandee as it deserves. Why the foreign house of Savoy should be less entitled to respect than the foreign house of France it would be difficult to explain. The Prince of Wales is a Knight of the Golden Fleece—the only Englishman who enjoys that distinction. The Spanish order was conferred on him when he was ten years old, the Austrian some time later. Not long ago it was whispered that his Catholic Majesty was rather anxious for an exchange of ribbands between the Courts of S. Ildefonso and St. James. He wanted the Garter for himself and would have conferred the Fleece on the Duke of Edinburgh or on Prince Albert Victor of Wales—perhaps on both—to secure for himself the most coveted of all decorations, that about which no sovereign feels that he belongs to the inner circle of royalty.

Throwing His Family to the Wolves.

Self-preservation is said to be the first law of nature, yet there are circumstances in which this law should be infringed, and the safety of others take precedence of the long no to preserve one's life from the danger which threatens it. No one, for instance, can read, without a feeling of indignation, the subjoined incident, related by a Russian contemporary. A peasant, reading near Moscow, was traveling through a deserted part of the country in a conveyance containing himself, his wife and four children, when the party was pursued by a flock of howling, famishing wolves. The peasant urged the horses along at full speed, but in spite of all the wolves gained every minute on the travelers. A horrible death seemed imminent, when the father devised a plan for personally escaping from the danger. He took his youngest child in his arms and deliberately threw it to the pursuers. This averted the danger for a brief time, but soon after the wolves were again following the carriage in search of fresh prey. Successively the other three children were thrown to them and devoured, which enabled the man and his wife to reach a neighboring village in safety. The poor mother, who had in vain implored her husband not to sacrifice in this barbarous fashion the lives of her little ones, denounced the unnatural parent to the authorities. The case has just been heard, and the father acquitted, on the theory that he had the right to sacrifice his children since his own life was at stake. The law of his country may absolve him, but every parent will condemn him.

Never Forget Anything.

A successful business man says there were two things which he learned when he was eighteen, which were afterwards of great use to him, namely: "Never to lose anything and never to forget anything." An old lawyer sent with him an important paper, with certain instructions what to do with it. "But," inquired the young man, "suppose I lose it, what shall I do then?" The answer was, with the utmost emphasis, "You must not lose it." "I don't mean to," said the young man, "but suppose I should happen to?" "But I say you must not happen to! I shall make no provision for any such occurrence, You must not lose it!"

FARM AND GARDEN.

MICE AND RABBITS GNAWING TREES.—Every winter the agricultural journals contain inquiries as to a remedy to prevent mice and rabbits gnawing trees and we have nearly annually answered them. Our remedy, which we have tried with success, has proved effective in every instance in which it has been properly applied. It is to bandage the trees with any old cotton or woolen cloth, or very stiff paper will do. For mice, eight or ten inches high will answer; for rabbits, not less than two feet. The latter standing upright can reach up very nearly two feet as far as they can reach they will gnaw. If the same cloth, if put away, will last for several years. Of course the bandaging must be well done and tied to the trees securely. In gardens, where trees are sure to be found if there are any in the vicinity a good protection is to feed them with cabbage-leaves, or other scraps of vegetable refuse, rutabagas, carrots, hay, etc. A "dead trap," baited with apple, will also soon clear a garden; but, in a starting condition, a half dozen rabbits will destroy fifty young trees in a single night. One winter they were not only injured several young pear trees for us, but nipped off the tender ends of our apple shrubs as cleanly as if done with pruning shears.

PITS FOR VEGETABLES.—Most of our cellars are too warm for the best preservation of vegetables, and it is therefore, advisable to store only a limited quantity for immediate use, in the house, while the main stock should be kept in a cool barn cellar, or in an outdoor pit. Such a pit, for family use, is easily made by digging a trench about three or four feet wide and of the same depth and as long as necessary, taking care to select a situation where water can not stand. At the approach of winter the pit is filled up to the level of the ground with the roots to be wintered. Beets, turnips, carrots, etc. Narrow partitions of soil may be placed longitudinally between the different kinds, so that each may be taken out separately. The dividing of the pit into several sections has the additional advantage of making the bulk of each smaller. Large quantities of roots in one mass are liable to heat and do not keep well as smaller lots. The roots are then covered with enough soil, say six inches, to protect them against the frost of winter. When severe cold sets in about the middle of December, more soil is thrown on, not less than two feet, over every part of the pit, sloping off towards the sides, and the surface, firmly packed down with the back of a spade. With heavy soil this will be sufficient to turn off the rain and the snow water, but in sandy soil it is better to add an additional protection of straw, corn-stalks or boards.

WHITE CHEESE.—The reports speak of a considerable increase in the make of white cheese this season. There are certain markets where uncolored cheese is called for at higher figures than colored cheese brings, and this has caused an increased make of this year. But those who prefer white cheese are more exacting and require it to be without fault when they are ready to pay the highest price. Yet the class that prefers this cheese is limited in number, so that the market is easily overstocked. That appears to be the case this season, and that has placed it at a disadvantage. If this class of buyers become supplied it is difficult to sell it for a good price on the general market. London and Manchester, England, take more of the white cheese than all the other markets. It is only safe as a general thing, to make that class of goods that every body buys. The great body of buyers prefer yellow butter and cheese, and where nature has not properly colored the butter, the artificial color must be applied to obtain the best prices. This year the market appears to be overstocked.

LEAVES AND FRUITS.—The absolute necessity of leaves in developing fruit is becoming well understood by cultivators, but we still see some blunders committed by those who do not fully understand the value of the organs. The owner of a vineyard concluded he would have better grapes than his neighbors if he turned the full rays of the sun on the forming and ripening bunches. He cut off most of the shoots above the bunches, and thus removed two-thirds of all the fully grown foliage. The consequence was the grapes were nearly worthless and the vines were ruined. It is the foliage and not the fruit which wants the sunlight. Another instance: A tree of the Yellow Gange plum dropped its leaves from leaf-blight when the plums were only two-thirds grown, and with only a bitter flavor. The branches were cut away for some weeks, and the fruit was stationary. A new crop of leaves then came out, the plums finished their growth and ripened into the honeyed sweetness peculiar to that variety.

VIEW OF AN OLD FARMER.—A successful old farmer once said, that "one acre of land well prepared and cultivated will produce more than two which are sown with the same amount of labor used on one. One cow, horse, mule, sheep or hog, well fed and cared for, is more profitable than two fed on the amount that will keep one well. One acre of grass is worth more than two of cotton where no grass is raised. The farmer who never reads the papers, and sneers at those farming and improvements, generally has a sickly, broken-down family, and complains of bad seasons and poor lands. The farmer who is above us business, and entrusts to others to manage, in due season has no business to attend to."

FOR storing onions, there is no better place than a dry, cool, and airy loft, where there can be no dampness, and often looked over for the removal of those which may have begun to decay. Warmth and moisture are fatal to the keeping of onions, and much handling is almost equally so.

From an apparently very carefully conducted experiment by Prof. C. A. Young, of Princeton, N. J., it appears that the thermo-electric power of iron and platinum undergoes no variation in a vacuum. (American Journal of Science, November, 1880), and thus modifies, if it does not disprove, the induction of Exner that thermo-electric force in general is due to the contact of the gases which bathe the metals.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

COCOA.—Many different kinds of cocoa are now advertised, but when the cocoa is properly prepared there can be no doubt that the cocoa made from them is less heavy and more digestible than that obtained in other ways. Bruise one fourth pound of best Florida cocoa nibs in a mortar, add two quarts of water and boil slowly eight hours. Then strain and pour into bottles. It will keep fresh for several days. Heat the quantity required for breakfast, and serve in a kettle, with a spirit lamp underneath, as it is most important that the cocoa should be hot. Botted milk should be served up at the same table. This method of preparing the cocoa enables the housekeeper to have it always ready at hand to heat as required in a few minutes. She'll cocoa is cheaper; it must be boiled very slowly, the proportions of water being one quart to a breakfast-cupful of cocoa. After straining and let it get cold, then skim off all the oil, and give it another boil before serving. Another economical way of making cocoa is to take three handfuls of shell cocoa and one ounce of pounded nibs; boil them in water three or four hours the day before the cocoa is wanted.

CARPETS.—The custom of completely covering the floor of bed-chambers with carpets is rapidly becoming obsolete. In some instances, people use no carpet at all. This extreme change is not at all desirable. It is good to have carpets in every part of the room where the feet must regularly be placed. It is bad to have carpets in part of the room where the feet are not regularly placed. These two rules govern the whole position, and the most inexperienced housewife can easily remember them.
