Smith of Brooklyn, might be the Mahone of the next House of Represeatatives. It is believed that he holds the casting vote and can control the organizatinon of the House. Mr. Smith says his position is this: He was nom-Republican, and his candidacy was indorsed by the Democrats of his district. He enters Congress wholly un-the White House and made as com- or faction, and perfectly free to act on any and all questions recording to the dictates of his own judgment. He will form no alliance with any party or clique. No one is authorized to say how he will vote in the organization of the House, nor is it probable that he could himself until congress convenes. He proposes to vote in the best light when the time for voting comes. Politicians need not count on him.
