not compare with it. But—when the frost comes, in one week the entire scene changes, and this holds specially in regard to the western and s. western parts of the state. I made a trip some 25 miles west of Wichita a few weeks ago, and while Kansas universally is dreary in the winter, this part seems to be doubly so. Before you, as far as the eye can see is one vast stretch of dead prairie. Not a green thing is visible save a few grainfields upon which the stock is grazing. Not a tree or shrub within sight, save here and there a few that have lately been planted. Two, three and sometimes more miles apart you will find where some settler has taken a claim, erected a shanty often not more than 12x14 feet, one story high. Occasionally one with two rooms, while a house containing 4 or 5 rooms is large enough to admit of a sign on front which tells you it is intended as a hotel or something of the tended as a hotel or something of the kind. Sod houses and stables as well as "dug outs" are still quite common. Fences are seldom seen. Few cattle are Fences are seldom seen. Few cattle are kept, as they must be herded, but a change is taking place. It is found that offer at public sale on the premises in Madisonchange is taking place. It is found that wheat is too uncertain to be depended burg, on. upon, and farmers are turning their attention more to cattle, hogs and broom corn. As the settlers understand the country and the climate better they can adapt themselves and their work to it with profit and comfort. As a Pennsylvanian who has lived all his lifetime amongst hills, mountains, evergreens and streams of fresh sparkling water, passes over this country he is very apt upon, and farmers are turning their atpasses over this country he is very apt to exclaim.

"Home, sweet home." But it is astonishing to see how con-tented and happy most of these people are. I mean those who remain, for it is a fact that can not be denied that a very large per cent of Kansas emigrants remain only a short time. But where they settle down and succeed financially, they soon seem to adapt themselves to the country and its ways and are as many cases I might single out one, as a for payment. fair representative of a large class. Some five or six years ago a Mr. B., of Lewisburg, Union Co., Pa., failed in business and was left with only a few dollars in money with which to com-mence anew the battle of life, at the age of 65. THE PHILADELPHIA

Now stands confessedly at the head of Philadelphia journalism in a'l that makes a thoroughly complete, general and family newspaper. It is more complete in its news, in its special correspondence, in its varied contributions on all subjects of popular interest, and in all the qualities of a newspaper for the family circle and for the business man than any of its contemporaries, because its facilities and resources are equal to every want of a first-class parions of the contemporaries.

former large circulation during the past year. Its contributors from week to week are among the foremost men of the nation, and no fdepartment of news or literature is slighted in any number on any pretext. It is adapted as well to women as to men; hence, although its political intelligence is full and accurate and its political editorials free and fearless, liberal provision is made for literary, dramatic and musical matters, travels and adventure, fiction, poetry, fashions and the chronicle of current social events. In all these dedepartments the pens of the best writers are engaged, while selections from other journals are made with care, taste and fullness that are unsurpassed.

THE "ANNALS OF THE WAR"—chapters of unwritten history contributed by prominent actors in the war of the rebellion, are a valuable feature of the paper and have become a recognized depository of such matters, whether from Northern or Southern sources. This department, as well as all others, will be kept fully up to the 'high standard of former years.
