TO KEEP HONEY.—Put the honey in a dry, warm room. If the temperature is even 100° F. it will be all the better. In such a room the honey will not gather moisture, or "sweat," as it is called, and there will be no trouble from souring. Extracted honey should always be kept in open vessels covered with cotton cloth, so the moisture, in case it was not extracted before it was innocently cured, would escape. If this precaution is taken, there is little danger in extracting before the honey is capped over, beginning just as the cap-plate is commenced. If extracted honey is kept in a temperature of from 80° to 100°, it will not granulate. Granulation, however, does not injure the honey; in fact it is one of the best tests of its purity. To re-liquify candied honey, we have only to heat it. If we are careful not to raise the temperature above 180°, we will lose none of its excellent qualities. To do this, easily, place the crock or can containing the honey in a vessel of water, placing something on the bottom of the vessel so that the crock may not touch the bottom and become too much heated. If the water in the vessel is not permitted to boil, there is little danger of the honey being injured. Honey should be put up in clean attractive packages, which will not leak.

WHAT FORMS OF NITROGEN DO PLANTS USE FOR FOOD?—Plants can take their nitrogen as ammonia, as nitric acid, and as organic nitrogen. They seem to prefer nitrates and ammonia. The number of organic nitrogen compounds which they are able to digest, so to speak, is limited. Practically the larger part of the nitrogenous food of plants seems to consist of the nitric acid which their roots gather from the soil. This nitrogen is derived mostly from the decay of vegetable and animal remains in the soil, though part comes from the atmosphere in the form of ammonia and nitric acid. The inert nitrogen compounds, which, until changed, are useless to the plant, are gradually altered by the process of nitrification above referred to, and finally reach the condition of ammonia and nitric acid, the forms which plants prefer. And not only is the vegetable matter of the soil worked over by the use of plants, but animal refuse, dung, guano, and the various materials used as fertilizers, including even ammonia, are transformed by nature in that wonderful laboratory which we call the soil, and made into the compounds best fitted for the plant.

ORANGE GROWN FROM CUTTINGS.—The orange grows readily from cuttings, both of the branches and the root, but experienced hedgers only use plants raised from seeds. The labor of making the cuttings is much greater, but the great objection is the lack of uniformity of the plants thus raised. In setting a hedge it is important to use plants as nearly alike as possible in size and vigor, else those that have a slight advantage at first, in size and strength, will keep it, crowding the weaker, and preventing that uniformity so desirable in a complete hedge. For this reason the first step with hedge plants, when they are taken up in the fall, is to carefully sort them and in the bundles, so that in planting, those in any part of the hedge will be as much alike as possible. If a dozen cuttings were raised from a shoot they would be very much unlike; those from the terminal bud, and a few other buds nearest the top would be much more vigorous than those from buds lower down and some of them would be of such slow growth as to be unfit for planting in a hedge.

THERE are many notes on cattle which if kept constantly washed clean with cold water and kept free from dirt would be of themselves. A very careful herdman says his practice of curing hot rot is to thoroughly cleanse the affected parts with warm water and soap, and then apply warm tar between the hoof. In very bad cases there will be a large core to come out; remove it carefully with the thumb and finger, cleanse the cavity as above with soap and water, and then fill with warm tar. Keep the parts thoroughly covered with tar, even if it is necessary to use a bandage. Keep the animal in a clean, dry pasture. It is no more liable to affect the whole system than any other ulcer. When once cured there is no danger of its appearing again unless from the same cause.

The British government has some very stringent rules regarding the manufacture of gunpowder for the public service. The charcoal is to be made of dog-wood and must be of the utmost cleanliness, any trace of the bark being considered an impurity sufficient to condemn it. The wood must also be cut in the spring, not that it is not just as good at any other time, but because when the sap is rising the bark is easily removed and the wood is perfectly clean, while with wood cut later the process involves the boiling of the wood or the shaving of the bark with a knife, and the wood itself decays much faster when stacked.

The absorbent powers of charcoal are so great that it will absorb nearly eighty times more gas than its own weight. It is to this quality that it owes its efficacy when given to bloated animals, and nothing equal to it was ever given or has ever been discovered in such cases. Few of our readers but are doubtless aware how magnificently it acts in human complaints, and to such it is recommended in diseases of domestic animals, and especially of swine, with just as much confidence in its being a success as when given to human beings.

WHAT WILL KILL NORRELL?—Norrell has running roots, and can only be killed by plowing it under deeply and growing some other crop that will smother it. If the ground is too wet to grow grass and clover it should be drained. As the ground is probably well seeded with the sorrel, it will be necessary to persevere for some time before it can be wholly cleared of it. When the ground is well drained a good application of lime would be useful.

POSEY county, Indiana, claims to have raised the largest cow in the world. Her name is Lady Posey, bred mixed Durham and Big English. Her measurements are: Greatest height, 6 feet 10 inches; girth, 8 feet 9 inches; length, 10 feet 8 inches; including tail, 17 feet; her form is good, and, though not fat, she weighs 8,000 pounds. Her color is red and white; red predominating. Age, six years. Her present owner lives in Stark county, Illinois.

STEAR BEETS, mangels or turnips boiled are excellent food for breeding sows. It is as necessary that a breeding sow should be a good milkier as it is in the care of a cow. The value of a sow's progeny depends largely upon the milk she gives. The feeding of such roots as mentioned above, not only produces a good supply of milk, but adds greatly to the healthy condition of the sow.

In sowing wheat be careful that no foul seeds get into the ground through the drill or by the hand of the sower. Have your seed washed perfectly clean. An hour spent in making seed clean will save a day or a week in the future in eradicating weeds.

DOMESTIC.

A BROTH FOR THE SICK.—For one portion of broth take half a pound of freshly killed meat, cut in small pieces, add to it 1 1/2 pounds of distilled water, to which has been added four drops of pure chlorhydric (muriatic) acid, and half to one drachm of common salt; mix them well together. After standing an hour, the whole is strained through a conical hair sieve, such as is ordinarily used in the kitchen, allowing it to pass through without pressing. The portion passing through first being cloudy, it is again passed through the sieve, and this process repeated until it becomes perfectly clear. Upon the residue of meat remaining in the sieve, half a pound of distilled water is poured, in small portions. In this manner about one pound of liquid (extract of meat) is obtained, of a red color, and pleasant meaty taste. It is administered to the sick, cold, by the cupful, according to their inclination. It must not be heated, as it becomes cloudy thereby, and a thick coagulum or meat albumen and hematin is deposited. A young lady of 18 years, in my family, being ill with typhus fever, first introduced this preparation. It was called forth by the remark of my family physician, (Dr. Pfeufer), that, in a certain state of this disease, the greatest difficulty met with by physicians lay in incomplete digestion, a consequence of the excitation of the intestines, and besides, in the want of a nutriment proper for digestion and for the formation of blood. The common broths prepared by boiling are deficient—in fact in all these constituents necessary for the formation of the albumen of the blood—and the yolks of eggs, often added thereto, contains very little of this material, for it has 82 per cent. water and fat, and only 17 per cent. of a substance very similar to it, it is not the same as the albumen of eggs, and whether this is equal in nutritious qualities to the albumen of the meat is, according to the investigations of Magendie, at least doubtful. The new broth contains besides meat albumen, a certain quantity of hematin, and, therein, a far greater quantity of iron necessary for the formation of the blood corpuscles, and finally, the digestive chlorhydric acid. A great hindrance to the employment of this broth during the summer is its liability to change in warm weather, like sugar water with yeast, without the usual odor. (What substance is here formed is well worthy investigation.) On account of this the meat must be extracted with perfectly cold water, and in a cold place. Ice water, and refrigeration with ice, completely remove this difficulty. Most important of all is that the meat be perfectly fresh, and not several days old. This broth is now in use in the hospital and in the private practice of several of the most distinguished physicians of Munich. I should, perhaps, have mentioned greater publicity to so simple a thing if a new—and to my family especially important—case had not convinced me of the great nutritious properties of this soup, and hence arises the natural wish that its benefits may be experienced by a wider circle, and other sufferers be restored by its beneficent effects. A young married lady, who, in consequence of a certain inflammation, could take no solid food, lived for two months entirely upon this broth, at the end of which period her health was entirely restored. During this time she gained in flesh and strength. Generally patients take this food without opposition only so long as they are ill; as soon as they can take other food they reject this, perhaps owing to the color and the faint meat odor. It might in many cases be of use to color the broth brown by adding burnt sugar.

ONE CAUSE OF COLIC IN HORSES.—Colic in horses is often brought on by feeding hay passed through the corn-stalk cutter, mixed with meal, middlings, or bran, and then wet up. The horse eats this food, thus prepared, so rapidly, that it is not properly masticated, and consequently becomes so clogged up in the stomach as to cause indigestion, followed by colic; more especially if directly after eating he is allowed to drink heartily of water, and the colder this is, so much the more liable to who had no solid food, lived for two months entirely upon this broth, at the end of which period her health was entirely restored. During this time she gained in flesh and strength. Generally patients take this food without opposition only so long as they are ill; as soon as they can take other food they reject this, perhaps owing to the color and the faint meat odor. TO COOK POULTRY.—All kinds of poultry and meat can be cooked quicker by adding to the water in which they are boiled a little vinegar or a piece of lemon. By the use of a little acid, there will be a considerable saving of fuel, as well as shortening of time. Its action is beneficial on old, tough meats, rendering them quite tender and easy of digestion. Faint meats and fowls will lose their taste and odor, if cooked in this way, and if not used too freely, no taste of it will be acquired.

A VERY WHOLESOME FAMILY SOUP.—Two pounds of neck of beef, one pound of peeled potatoes, four onions, one stock of celery, cup of beef and vegetables, and put them into a sauce pan, with three quarts of cold water, next add two ounces of pearl barley and let it simmer two hours; then add half a pound of breast crabs, with pepper and salt to taste and simmer two hours longer; then rub the whole through a wire sieve; add one teaspoonful of brown and one of mushroom catsup; boil all up again and serve.

PLASTER OF PARIS mixed with gun arabic water makes an excellent white cement, but must be used immediately as it hardens quickly. A mixture of five parts of gelatine to one of cast chrome of lime, applied to broken edges, which should be pressed together and exposed to the sunlight, makes an insoluble cement.

A FLANNEL cloth dipped into warm soap suds and then into whiting and applied to paints will instantly remove all grease and dirt. Wash with clean water and dry. The most delicate paint will not be injured, and will look like new.

SOFTENING CAST IRON.—The surface of cast iron may be softened for turning or planing by immersion for 24 hours in a solution of one part of nitric acid to four parts of water. Writing executed with this ink may, it is true, be removed by means of diluted acids, but it may be rendered visible by other chemical means.

OLIVE OIL.—Olive oil, to which a few drops of alcohol have been added, is an excellent application for ointments on which fine instruments are to be sharpened.

HUMOROUS.

MANY stories are told of the frugality of Scotchmen, but the Elgin Courant gives the latest and best: "A Highlander came a speckled hen came into Aberdeen one day and fastened his vehicle to a post. Pulling an old sack from under the seat, he proceeded to feed the horse. What on earth the hen was for we could not imagine, until, just before leaving, he tied one end of the string attached to the hen's leg, to the hind wheel of the wagon, and the mystery was solved. He had brought the hen along to pick up the last lot left by the horse, that nothing might be lost."

VERY narrow escape: A youth of Hibernian extraction in chopping wood with a hatchet the other day was so unfortunate as to graze the thumb of his left hand with which he was steadying the piece of kindling he was splitting. Ruelly gazing at the injured member he remarked: "Be gorra, it was a good thing it did not have a hole of the handle with both hands, or I'd have cut it off sure."

A Smile of Satisfaction.—This from the Cleveland (Ohio) Penny Press, carries its own suggestion: Recently meeting Mr. H. G. Keffler, treasurer of the Cleveland Herald, our representative inquired of that gentleman, after stating his mission, if he personally knew anything about the Great German Remedy St. Jacob's Oil. A smile played across Mr. Keffler's expressive face and his eyes twinkled merrily as he replied in the affirmative. "I will not refuse to state my experience with it, and you may use it as you think best.
