FOR THE FARM AND HOME.

A Thin Cow.

If a cow is fed too much meal she will be poor and thin, and the skin may be irritated and congested. Too much food has a similar effect, or is worse than too little, as it produces indigestion, which disorders the blood and causes a feverish condition of the system. As it is only the food that is digested healthfully that makes flesh, fat and milk, these will not be made if a larger quantity be given than can be digested. A cow that is suffering from indigestion may be treated as follows: Give a pint of linseed-oil, and repeat it the second day after; then feed some bran slop or some cut feed with bran and a little meal in it, but in moderate quantity, until her appearance improves.

Potato Experiments.

A correspondent in the Cultivator and Country Gentleman gives the result of some experiments in growing potatoes: Some years ago I selected some healthy potatoes that had no sign of running out, and made a selection of the largest and smallest firm tubers in each lot. I planted the same number of hills of each kind side by side; gave the same treatment in every particular, and in the fall I weighed the product. There was one pound difference in favor of the large cut potatoes. I then selected the largest from the largest and the smallest from the smallest, and planted the next season the same number of hills side by side, with the same treatment. In the fall the weight of product was one and one-half pounds in favor of small tubers. I continued the experiment for five years, selecting the largest from the largest and the smallest from the smallest. Sometimes one vielded the best, sometimes the other; but the variation never reached two pounds. At the end of the five years' experiment there was one-half pound in favor of the small tubers. The experiment comprised ten hills of each.

Medium Hogs.

It is never the oldest and largest hogs that are the most desirable for either the packer or the consumer. There is always double risk in curing the hams and shoulders from very large hogs over those taken from hogs of common, medium size; then if the which seemed to mock me as I stood hams of very large hogs come out well among them. But I was not done, for cured, there is hardly one consumer in a thousand but what would rather have hams out of hogs weighing about 250 pounds, even at a strong advance all struggling for a share in the awful in price, than to have the mammoth sized hams. There is no doubt but what any farmer can make more clear money as a rule, out of pigs that come in the month of March or April, than can be made out of pigs that come in any other part of the year. The early crawled to the foot of a tree and died spring pigs will be ready to graze on clover about as soon in the season as it head, the gibbering skull beneath it will be ready for grazing, and they will want little else but this kind of feed until new corn will be ready to feed in September. They should in all cases be fattened on corn and made ready for market by Christmas, or about nine months of age. If the right breeds are kept, hogs of this age can be made to weigh 275 to 300 pounds, making in all respects as good pork as could be required for consumers' use in any market; or by feeding a moderate amount of corn and oatmeal through August and September, they can be sold in October, and will then make first-rate bacon hogs, and it is never a possible thing to produce good pork any cheaper or as cheap as it can be done in this way, as the general weather conditions through all the life of such hogs is in the highest degree favorable for the growth and thrift of these animals.-Drovers' Journal.

Five minutes' soaking in water and ammonia will clean the dirtiest frying pan so that it will only need rinsing and wiping to be ready for use.

If the inside of your tea pot or coffee pot is black from long use, fill it with hard water, throw in a piece of hard soap, set on the stove and let it boil from half an hour to an hour. It will clean it as bright as a new dollar and cost no work.

The Field of Glory.

Clambering over the rude bank of logs and earth that formed the defensive line of our antagonists, I found myself at last on the well-remembered ground. But what a sight met my eye! Composting Manure.

One of the important questions which every farmer has to decide is the best method of composting manure. Farmers do not agree on this subject; while some hold that it is best to apply manure in its green state and compost it with the soil, others believe it best to compost it in the yard by mixing with it an equal quantity of muck or loam. Advocates of the last method c,aim that the manure is thus decomposed and brought into plant food that is immediately available. The advocates of composting directly with the soil claim that it saves a large amount -of labor of hauling in material to compost with, the pitching of it all over, and the carting out and spreading twice the quantity: and they also claim that during the process of decomposi. tion in a compost heap, under ordinary conditions, a portion of the fertilizing elements is lost; while if applied directly to the soil, the process of decomposition inproves the condition of the soil and prepares its plant growth much better than if applied after decomposi-

Letters stand for words, and they hoped to light upon the words that should suggest the cure. Grieved Many Days over their lack cod luck, as they said, and the Good Man Dreamed again and again, but saw no more angels. Hope deferred maketh the heart "Oh, that the angel had Guided Me Definitely and Given More Directions." rclaimed, again and again.

Nearly two weeks had elapsed since the night of the Great Mysterious Dream, when there came to the house a pamphlet. with his exhausting office work, which he still pursued, determining if possible to die in the harness, Jones was about to throw the pamphlet in the fire when something prompted him to examine it. Surely nought he, here can be nothing that will Pierce this Gloom Most Distressing, or Give Me. Dishearte ed. any relief. Poor man he had worked letters over in his mind, and made so many combinations with them, that they occurred in almost every sentence he uttered. They entered even into his prayers. Heaven Grant Me Deliverance, he would say, nor let disease Grind Me Down. and so forth, ad infinitum, and a mile or two beyond

Mentally tortured and suffering in every fiber of his body, what won or that he read page after page of the pam hlet. It was a work on diseases, and in the morbid state of his mind its contents seemed to suit him. It spoke of almost every disease that flesh is heir to, but oh, joyl as he read, a Glimpse Most Delightful of light stole in upon him. "Eureka! Eureka!" he cried. "Wife, I have it, I have it."

Everybody in the house heard him cry Eureka, and rushed to the room to hear what he had found. All expected to see some Great Miracle Done, and then came the explanation. Simple, of course, but why had he not thought of it before? Oh, what a revelation! Here was hope for him and for all consumptives. Here, hope for suffering friends and neighbors. That night hescare could sleep, but when he did, he again saw a bright vision of golden letters, in fact, a Glittering Monagram Deciphered readily, and reading G. M. D.; and again P. P. P. and yet again F. P.; and one huge P, around which these others were entwined, and then W. D. M. A. All the letters blended, yet was di tinct. All he had seen in the book. all he again saw in his vision. Dream Most Glorious. D. M. G.-G. M. D.-Again he rang the changes; backward, forward, every way. Gold Medal Deserved. M. G. D.-Misery's Great Deliverer,--till time would fail to tell them all. P. P. P. stood for Perfect Peace Promised for sufferers, and sweet release from Prostrating Purgatorial Pains. And again F. P. was Freedom Promised, and backward, P. F., it became Pain Flees. Now he could get well, and once well, he would be a missionary, a Glad Missionary Devoted to the work of telling others how they might get deliver-ance. He went through the list of diseases among those of his own acquaintance, from John Robinson, whose torpid liver gave him constant headache and severe bilious attacks. on through the list of those suffering from ulcers, coughs, weak and diseased lungs, to his friend, General B——, who was as near the grave as he. And for all these, as well as for himself, the Grave May Disappear from present vision, and each may be Given More Decades of life than they had hoped to have years.
