Mixing Grain Foods

Intelligent farmers everywhere realize that a proper mixture of grain foods is more economical than to feed exclusively of one or two kinds. A Connecticut farmer who makes farming pay feeds his cows two quarts daily from a mixture of 1200 pounds of coarse wheat bran, 1000 pounds of corn meal and 500 pounds of cottonseed. This is mixed by being thoroughly shoveled over on a tight barn to feed coarse bran to hogs occasionally, when meal is fed regularly, as it keeps them in good condition.

Carrots.

Our farmers do not raise enough carrots. They make a horse's coat very sleek. They should have good depth of soil and fine tilth. Our farmers' wives do not fully appreciate the value of the carrot in cookery. Indeed, the liking for carrots is an acquired one. So is that for tomatoes. So is that for parsnips. The writer remembers that he was obliged to cultivate a liking for green peas, which, marrowfats, is not to be wondered at. mans use it largely. The queen of removing these little nuisances. England always has carrots and turnips cooked with her boiled mutton.-New York Herald.

Substitute for Rain.

Hoeing, and the frequent stirring of the surface of the soil, are good substitutes for rain. Those parts of the garden that are most frequently cultivated show the best results. It is probable that corn, watermelons, tomatoes, Lima beans, and cabbage, and possibly other plants, if well started, in good, deep soil, may go through a two months' drought without very serious damage. A deep, well manured soil suffers much less than a shallow soil. Sub-soiling and manure are to a certain extent substitutes for rain. Moisture comes from below. Underdraining is also a safeguard against drought. The course of the drains in the garden can easily be marked in a dry season, by the ranker growth of vegetation above them. Irrigation, in many parts of the country, will pay. The soil if well prepared, could use, to good advantage, twice the quantity of water it receives from rains during the dry months of summer.

Scraping Trees.

Do we approve of scraping trees? asks a friend of ours. Certainly we do, provided they need it, and one can rarely find an old tree that does not, Aside from the fact that the removal of the old bark-scales breaks up a refuge for various insects, including the woolly-aphis, the increased beauty of the tree repays trouble. There are scrapers made for the purpose; one of these has a triangular blade, another a long blade, with one flat and another slightly concave edge. An old hoe is quite as good a tool as any; cut off the handle to about 18 inches, and do not grind the blade too sharp, as a cutting implement is not needed - only a scraper. On a very old trunk some force may be needed to detach the scales that are partly loose, but on young trees be careful not to wound the healthy bark. The scraping may be done now, next month, or later. When there comes a moist drizzly water to apply with a brush. Paint over a thick coat of this soap and leave the rest to the rains. Later in furnished with mahogany trunks .-Agriculturist.

No More Gate Sagging.

Some years ago our attention was invited to what was considered as an inevitable and remediless evil-the sagging of farm gates, and the question was repeatedly put if farmers were forever to submit to these imperfect means of entrance to their fields, barnyards, etc.? Our reply was that time honored "bars" must be again adopted, for, all things considered, they were decidedly to be preferred to these sagging gates. What, indeed, is more annoying than a sagging gate? It is forever out of order. It may be stiffened up one day, and the next it will begin again to drop, in a little while to drag again, and away goes a hinge, and this costs time and money to repair. There has lately been, however, a substitute introduced for the farm gate, which is more efficient and convenient, and which requires no hinges, chains, clasps or a gate post. It is simply a panel of fence made of inch boards, say four slabs, six to eight inches wide, nailed together by cross pieces commencing about one foot from each end. At the back end of the panel two undressed common fence posts are set, one, the side on which can be moved easily, can be carried neighbor B.'s barn," round fully, is equally as good as a gate, has no posts to sag, no hinges to rust and break or any iron appliances in the way of fastening at all, and will not cost more than a sixth or tenth as much as an ordinary gate. Any farmer who can handle a saw and drive a nail ought to be able to make such an affair without further instruc tion. - Germantown Telegraph.

A paper has been read before the electrotechine society of Berlin, giving some interesting particulars relative to birds and telegraph wires. In treeless districts the smaller birds in spell, go over the scraped bark with Germany are very fond of roosting good soft soap, made thin enough with both on poles and wires. Swallows frequently build under the eaves where wires run into telegraph offices, and actually stop work by causing contact, the season the trees will appear as if between the wire and some neighboring body which will carry the electric current to the earth. Contacts with a like result are often caused by large birds alighting on the wires and causing them to swing together and touch. Woodpeckers frequently peck holes through the telegraph posts, and no kind of preparation of the wood seems to stop them from doing so. Sulphate of copper, corrosive sublimate, chloride of zinc and other poisons have been applied to the wood as preservatives respond to toasts. against rot; but the birds peck away at them all the same. At the recent electrical exhibition at the Crystal palace a part of one of these pecked posts was shown. The theory was then that the implements can only be seized when broached that the woodpecker mistook the vibration of the attached wires for the hum of insects, and attacked the post with the notion of getting at them. This theory is now combatted on the ground that dry poles are frequently infested with insects. But wood saturated with the poisons named above must certainly be excepted. The woodpeckers have evidently not yet per year. Those selling only beer and wine found this out.

Voluntary Tributes of Gratitude for Bene-

DEAR SIR-Please allow me the privilege of giving my estimony regarding the wonderful curative prop of your invaluable medicine, Hunt's Remedy. During the past six or seven years I have been a great suffer from kidney disease, and during a great part of the time my sufferings have been so intense as to be indescribble. Only those who have suffered by this dread disease know of the awful backache, and pains of all kinds, ccompanied by great weakness and nervous prostration loss of force and ambition which invariably attend it. I had all these troubles intensified, and was in such a tad condition that I could not get up out of my chair except by putting my hands on my knees, and almost rolling out before I could straighten up. I tried the bes doctors, and many kinds of medicine, but all failed to help me, and I experimented so long endeavoring to get cured that last spring I was in very poor shape, and in seeking for relief my attention was directed by a friend to the remarkable cures of kidney diseases, etc., which were being accomplished by Hunt's Remedy. I was in. duced to try it, and began to take it, and very soon limbered up," as it were; my severe backache and the intense pains I had suffered so long speedily dis appeared, notwithstanding I had been bothered with this complaint so many years.

When I began to take Hunt's Remedy I was considerably run down in my general health, and suffered also from loss of appetite. Ever since I have been taking the Remedy, however, my improvement has been most marked; my former complaints, aches, pains, etc., have disappeared, and I now feel like my former self, hale, pearty and sound in health. I shall always keep Hunt's nedy with me, and would most earnestly re all those who are sufferers from Kidney or Liver dis eases, or diseases of the Bladder or Urinary organs, to wee Hunt's Remedy, and take no other.
