Mr. Healey of New York, had some time since as a subject for a portrait a voung lady who came to his studio so dedizzened with paint and powder that every characteristic line was obliterated. Mr. Healey was, of course in a dilemma. He could not order the girl to go and wash her face. He would lose his commission, and he is too polite a gentleman. He could not lay the same paint on canvas that there was on her face; it would not be satisfactory to the family. When the sketch was lined in he rose from his seat, sat down beside his subject, and kindly asked her if she was feeling as well as usual. Surprised of course, she replied that she was. "But, Miss Jones, you walked from your hotel, did you not?" "Yes." "And you came hurriedly up stairs without stopping to rest?" "Why yes, of course." "Ah, yes, Miss Jones, but you see, though you may not be feverish, you have exerted yourself so severely that there is so much color in your face that I fear it would mislead me. Now to-morrow, if you will be so good, please bathe your cheeks in cool water the last thing, come in a close carriage, and stop and rest yourself upon the sofa you will find on every landing. In that way I am sure we shall have no more trouble." His speech had the desired effect. The faint flush on her face when she came the next day, was perfectly natural and did not at all retard the picture .-- Washington Capi-

VISIT TO A HAREM.

What the Wife of a New York Minister

The ladies of the literary society of the Madison Avenue Congregational church, New York, listened in the church lecture room to a description by Mrs. John P. Newman, the wife of the clergyman, of her visit to the harem of the pasha of Hillah, Babylon. Mrs. Newman's visit was made ten years ago, when she was traveling with her husband, who was not permitted to accompany her into the interior of the harem.

"The gates of the 'Abode of Bliss,' " said Mrs. Newman, "closed instantly after I entered the building. A long corridor opened into the main apartment of the harem. It was furnished with gorgeous tapestry hangings, and sumptuous satin furniture of curious design. . The curtained windows looked out upon blooming gardens. Ranged about the chamber in various attitudes were a score of women. Some were seated on divans and some were kneeling. Thirteen of them were the wives of the pasha. A cloud of negro servants attended to their wants. I could speak but a few words of Arabic, but we were at home on the subject of dress, which has a universal language of its own among women. All the women had large, long-lashed and lustrous eyes, and dark, finely chiseled features. Their costumes were magnificent, and strangely fashioned of rich satins and loaded with ornaments of gold and jewels and garlands of pearls. Their head-dresses were of silken gauze, held by bands of gold, and surmounted by graceful ostrich feathers. They wore silk trousers and silver slippers, and their finger nails were tinged with yellow.

gossiping with each other the whole day long is the sole occupation of these women of the harem. They live in luxurious bondage, in blissful ignorance of the outside world. I longed to reveal its beauties and possibilities to them, but could converse only by gestures. Before I left, a baby pasha was shown to me. Its mother looked like a veritable 'Sleeping Beauty.' The babe was wrapped in folds of fine linen, and its wardrobe consisted of over fifty different articles of apparel. The interest shown in the baby and the mother by the other women of the harem was to me a beautiful evidence of the universal sisterhood of women."

Pantaloons.

"Can you remember the styles of pantaloons that have prevailed in this

"Let me see," said the tailor; "yes, they are all before me in my mind's eve. There were the breeches of the period immediately succeeding the Revolution. They were short, reaching only to the knees, mostly made of cloth, buttoning at the sides. The wealthy wore them of velvet, or corduroy, as the fancy seized them, or of doe cloth. The first long pantaloons, as I have told you were merely comfortable bags, and this was principally due to the fact that they were homespun-made by willing, but unskillful, hands. The first improvement was when they were so altered in construction as to button elsewhere than at the side. Suspenders were not used until comparatively recent times, somewhere about 1840. I believe.

"Distinctive styles in breeches date from the close of the war. Then there came the garments tight at the waist and to the knees, where they bagged enormously, giving the appearance of swelled joints. The pockets were called top pockets, and could be reached only by pulling the vest up to the chin. Later they were cut high in the waist and medium in the legs. This was a return to first principles. The next to achieve popularity were those miserable 'tights.' They fitted the nether extremities like eelskins, and suddenly swelled to awful proportions at the bottom. They were the invention of a rowdy, and it was a shame decent people ever wore them. I'm glad they're gone. The hip pockets came into fashion along with the 'tights.' Young bloods fain would carry pistols, and, it rule is when Watteau over dresses are | being found cumbersome to add another position. At first the buttons of these garments were made of bone, then of rubber, later of metal, and now of metal in the shape of rivets, that decay only when the breeches themselves become deceased. The present styles are elegant, and a decided advance on any that have preceded. The trousers of to-day is as complete an institution as can be wished for. There are wellcontrived recesses for the watch, the pistol, the whisky flask, keys, knife, comb, handkerchief, pocket-book; in short, everything that the most fastidious man could desire to have about him. The only thing left for man to do is to learn how to wear breeches. Tall, slim men, with spider legs, should wear close, but not tight-fitting, garments; fat men look best in tight pantaloons; swells wear stripes; gamblers, plaids; Quakers, quiet colors; ministers, plain black cloth. Reporters glory in broadcloth, much to the disgust of the tailors."-Philadelphia Press.

The Pulse of Animals.

In horses the pulse at rest beats forty times, in an ox from fifty to fifty-five, and in sheep and pigs about seventy to eighty beats per minute. It may be felt wherever a large artery crosses a bone, for instance. It is in the horse on the cord which crosses over the bone of the lower jaw in front of its curved position, or in the bony ridge above the eye; and in cattle over the middle of the first rib, and in sheep by placing the hand on the left side, where the beating of the heart may be felt. Any material variation of the pulse from the figures given above may be considered a sign of disease. If rapid, hard, and full, it is an indication of high fever or inflammation; if rapid, small, and weak, low fever, loss of blood, or weakness. If slow, the probabilities point to brain disease, and if irregular, to heart troubles. This is one of the principal and sure tests of the health of an animal.
