Roses from Cuttings. European horticulturists sometimes adopt this mode of planting rose cuttings so as to root with more certainty. They bend the shoot and insert both ends in the ground, leaving a single bud uncovered at the middle and on the surface of the ground. The cuttings are about ten inches long, and are bent over a stick laid flat on the ground, holes being dug on each side of the stick for the reception of the ends of the shoot. The roots form only at the lower end of the shoot, but the other end being buried, prevents evaporation and drying up. A correspondent of the London Garden says that he has tried this, along with the old mode, and that, while the weaker cutting of the latter have shown symptoms of dying and failure, all the former have grown vigorously.

Parsnips for Animals.

When mixed with hay and other dry feed, parsnips are valuable for horses and cows, the feeding being commenced gradually, as with roots generally. They possess an important advantage over other roots, in that the crop may be safely left in the ground all winter, as freezing does not injure them when they thaw out in the ground, and thus the labor of late autumn harvesting is avoided. They are easily dug in spring by plowing a furrow close to the row and away from it, and pulling them out by hand -a few bushels being taken out at a time as needed. A quarter of an acre yielded 100 bushels last year on our grounds, or 400 bushels per acre, notwithstanding the extraordinary drouth. As the tops start to grow in spring they are rapidly cut off with sharp hoes, and thus the roots are kept for feeding for several weeks-Country Gentleman.

Fruit Culture.

The annual report on "Fruit Culture" issued by the Michigan State Horticultural Society, contains results of the experience of its members and many practical directions. A member who advocates summer pruning of small fruits applies it to the strawberry by keeping the runners cut, by which crown upon crown is added and the size and the productiveness of the fruit increased. He applies it to raspberries and blackberries by pinching back, to concentrate the bearing wood and admit free passage between rows for cultivation and gathering the crop. Black caps require, in his opinion, more pinching than red raspberries. and early thinning, the leaves secures well-ripened wood. Thinning in time will make weak-growing sorts strong.

Thinning the peach crop is generally recommended. Some growers thin out one half to two-thirds of the fruit on loaded trees, leaving the peaches several inches apart. Some do not thin until early in July, others do it early in June or before the pits harden, as that is believed to be the process which exhausts the trees.

Professor Beal, on the subject of cross-fertilization, says that crossing strawberries is easily accomplished all that is necessary is to plant two sorts together. But grapes fertilize before the flowers open, hence the covering must be removed and the stamens be carefully cut away and a paper bag be placed over the flowers to prevent any outside pollen from reaching them. The pollen having been previously gathered and secured in a bottle, is applied within a day or two. It is easily gathered for this purpose, whole stamens being cut off and drop. ped in the bottle. Apples are easily crossed, and are the best fruits for the novice to work on. Cut all the stamens away before the blossom of a cluster, and remove the others. In a day or two touch the five stigmas with the selected pollen. It is easier to effect crosses in glass-houses, in the absence of wind or insects, which often disturb results.

Plowing in green rye for enriching orchards has its advocates, who especially recommend this course in peach orchards. The seed should be sown in August, so as to secure a dense growth before winter. It must be turned under in the spring as soon as the heads begin to apppear. A single crop is insufficient, the green manuring should be continued year after year.

Venom of Serpents.

A remarkable discovery in toxicology, the science of poisons, has recently been made in this city by Drs. S. Weir Mitchell and Edward T. Reichert, These gentlemen have for some time past been conducting an elaborate study of the venoms of almost all American serpents, the bites of which are poisonous, as well as many foreign ones, and the recent report is made up from selections from their notes. Up to this time all observers have regarded the venoms as representing a single poison, but the researches of Dr. Mitchell and Dr. Reichert go to show that many of them contain two and several separate poisons.

The venoms especially mentioned China. are those of the rattlesnake, the moccasin, and the copperhead, which were obtained in a fresh state, in which they are all in the form of a slightly turbid, yellowish fluid. Dried cobra venom was also produced from Calcutta, India. It was found that in drying the venoms about seventy-five per cent of their weight was lost, and that in a state of aqueous solution all the properties of the fresh venom were preserved, except that the intensity of the poison was slightly diminished.

The reports show that the venom of the moccasin snake contains three proteides-one analogous to peptones, and a putrefacient; one akin to globulines, and a much more fatal poison, probably attacking the respiratory centers, and destroying the power of the blood to clot, and a third resembling the albumens. The external symptoms caused in animals by the several venoms-cobra, rattlesnake, moccasin, or copperhead -do not differ radically, save in degree. In all alike, there is some primary heart disturbance, temporarily lowered blood pressure, fatal enfeeblement of the respiratory centers and local effusion of blood with lessenng or loss of its power to clot. These atter symptoms are best seen when the animal experimented upon survives for some hours, or a day, and then, also, is noticable the breaking down of the capillaries and the tendency to local putresence and gangrene-Cobra venom is proved to be the most intense in its poisonous power, the venom of the copperhead next, then the moccasin and rattlesnake. The investigations in this line are as yet far from complete, and accordingly these facts are not asserted as being final or at all conclusive.—Philadelphia Rec-

The Howling Monkey.

The howling monkeys are the largest found in America, and are celebrat. ed for the loud voice of the males. Often in the great forests of the Amazon, or Orinoco, a tremendous noise is heard in the night or early morning, as if a great assemblage of wild beasts were all roaring and screaming together.

The noise may be heard for miles, and it is louder and more piercing than of any other animals, yet it is all produced by a single male howler sitting on the branches of a lofty tree. They are enabled to make this extraordinary noise by means of an organ that is possessed by no other animal. The lower jaw is unusually deep, and this makes room for a hollow, bony vessel about the size of a large walnut, situated under the roof of the tong ie, and having an opening in the windpipe by which the animal can force air into it. This increases the power of its voice, acting something like the hollow case of a violin and producing those mar velous rolling and reverberating sounds which caused the celebrated traveller Waterton to declare that they were such as might have had their origin in the infernal regions. The howlers are large and stout-bodied monkeys with bearded faces, and very strong and powerful grasping tails. They inhabit the wildest forests; they are very shy, and are seldom taken captive though they are less active than many other American monkeys.

The Ear.

Perhaps the most acceptable theory to-day is the one which places the origen of the trouble in the inner ear-The ear consists of three parts: the outer of these runs in as far as the drum; the middle part is the inside of the drum, and contains the chain of earbones; while the inner ear is a complicated affair, containing the essential organ of hearing.

As far as we are concerned, the inner ear is a membranous bag filled with fluid, and situated in the solid bone. From the back part of this bag run out three semicircular tubes communicating at both ends with the bag or vestibule. These run in three different planes, and are lined with hair-like nerve-filaments, which are much more numerous and sensitive at the anterior part of the tubes. The tubes are filled with liquid in which float little calcarious particles, the otoliths. These tubes are known as the semicircular canals. It was difficult to see and two others have arrived at Ship Island what connection with the sense of with yellow fever on board. that injuries to these impaired the bers of the French Chamber of Deputies.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From threeBoston Globe.]

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinklam, of Lynn, Mass., who above all other human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Woman," as some of her correspondents love to call her. She is zealously devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life-study, and is obliged to keep six lady essistants, to help her answer the large corr which daily pours in upon her, each bearing its special larden of suffering, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and

and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. ()ne says: "It works like a charm and saves much pain. It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhoea, irregular and painful Henstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Inceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the conequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life."

destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sle Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system. It costs only $1. per bottle or six for $5., and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the Vegetable Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass. For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation Billousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifler works wonders in its special line and bids fai to equal the Compound in its popularity. All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.
