

The Leopard's Favorite Morsels.

The poets, as Broome and Somerville, seem to think the leopard looks on the dog as its natural master and conqueror, whereas the fact is that the leopard looks upon the dog as its natural food. The leopard's taste for dogs is certainly one of the most extraordinary phenomena in natural history. We say that cats like fish and that monkeys are fond of nuts, but these are mere passing whims, caprices of the moment, compared to the constant passion of leopards for dogs. It is a very Chinaman for its delight in puppy, for it will follow a man for miles like his shadow if a dog be at his heels—and it will be a very extraordinary dog indeed, if it does not at last give the leopard its chance. The best of dogs sometimes commits the indiscretion of loitering behind his master, or running out of sight round a corner in front of him, and if he does this with a leopard on his track, nothing more is ever seen of the dog, and nothing more heard of him but his last squeal as he is swiftly snatched up from the path and carried with a sudden rustle of foliage, down the hillside. At night leopards will prow around the tent, sniffing under the canvas for the dog that they can smell within; or in the hill stations, will boldly come down among the houses and carry off the pet of the establishment, though servants may be moving about. It is on record, that in the station of Gumsor not a single dog escaped! and nearly every resident of India, who has ever camped out in the jungle where leopards are, or has lived in "the hills," has had some tragic experience of this mania of the leopard for dogs.

In about the same degree, but obviously for very different reasons, the monkey takes the most profound interest in the leopard, and when one is about the four-handed folk follow him as closely as they dare, shaking the branches in their absurd rage, chattering furiously at their enemy, and making faces at him. Sometimes, however, the leopard stops abruptly and glares at them, and the wretched monkeys gathering overhead, get so excited in their demonstrations, that very often one of their number is pretty sure to lose its balance and tumble conveniently into the leopard's mouth. A tradition was once widely current that the panther was sweetly scented—says Dryden, "the panther's breath was ever famed for sweet"—and that this fragrance was so fascinating to some small animals that it enticed them to their death in the jaws of the aromatic beast. It is a fact, however, that the panther itself is peculiarly sensible to perfumes, and among other instances is one of undeniable authenticity of a panther being tamed with lavender water.

Esthetic Cremation.

The new crematory in the Campo Verano at Rome was used for the first time a few days ago and the corpse of Signor Cipriani, an Italian senator was reduced to ashes in two hours and a half. The three other existing crematories of importance are at Gotha, Milan and Washington, Pa., respectively. In some of them gas is used as fuel, but in Rome the body, enveloped in a specially made shroud, rests on an iron frame above a fire of wood and coal; and it is believed that no other method of cremation is so simple and at the same time so cheap and unobjectionable. The new crematory is a handsome building in the Egyptian style, and consists of three chambers two of which are above the ground. In one of these latter the actual incineration takes place, and in the other is kept a register for the preservation of full particulars of every corpse that is burned. Beneath these rooms is a spacious vault, in which on shelves are ranged ornamental urns of porcelain, bronze and silver, to contain the ashes of the dead. The establishment is, in short, so well found and luxuriously appointed that it almost seems that we might be entering upon an era in which esthetic cremation shall be as fashionable as esthetic dress and furniture have been during the last decade.

Chicory Farming.

Chicory farming promises to be one of the coming industries of California farming. Chicory was first planted in that state about fifteen years ago, but since that time it has been extensively raised on the San Joaquin and Sacramento rivers. Chicory is cultivated on a small scale in some of the eastern states, and in some places in that section grows wild in abandoned fields and orchards. It grows very thrifty on the bottom lands of Louisiana and Texas. The root of the plant, when being prepared for use, is cut by a machine into small square blocks, then placed in the sun to dry, afterwards roasted, and finally ground in a mill. Chicory possesses few elements in common with coffee; and yet it imparts a taste to it greatly fancied by certain coffee drinkers in Europe. In France and Belgium, the common people have been so accustomed to chicory with the coffee they drink that they prefer it so prepared, to the beverage in its pure state. Travellers in those countries, even when they purchase pure coffee for their private consumption, find that the cooks will mix chicory with it, even after having received strict orders to the contrary.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

It is a curious coincidence that if the cholera should break out in this country this year it will be the third time it has done so at intervals of seventeen years. In 1832 it raged violently here, so it did in 1849, and again, but more mildly, in 1866.

A physician said that leprosy was a comparatively common disease among the Norwegian settlers of northwestern Wisconsin, and the statement was widely copied. The Milwaukee Sentinel has been unable to find a case in the state after a protracted search.

Is the poor bachelor to be driven from the face of the earth? In Manitoba he is subjected to an extra tax, and in France such military discriminations are to be made against him as to threaten to destroy him and his liberty-loving tribe amid the hardships and carnage of horrid war.

This is the iron age. The value on all the gold and silver mined in the United States in the year 1882 was not equal to that of iron. The amount of silver (coining value) mined was $46,800,000; of gold, $32,500,000; of pig iron manufactured, $106,366,429. The value of coal mined during the year was $146,632,581.

It is seriously proposed that several of the European powers should unite in the suppression of Mohammedan pilgrimages to Mecca by the occupation of the Holy City, which is so charged with pestilence almost always, and which sends so frequently the scourge of cholera over Egypt and the East. The remedy suggested is a daring one. It might cause a terrible war. But something has to be done very soon.

A man who has kept an account of the weather, claims that it invariably repeats itself, and gives the following as the result of his observations: All years ending in 9, 0 or 1, are extremely dry. Those ending in 2, 3, 4, 5 or 6, are extremely wet. Those ending in 7 or 8, are ordinarily well balanced. Those ending in 6 have extremely cold winters. Those ending in 2 have an early spring. Those ending in 3 or 4 are subject to great floods.

The intensity of the struggle for a livelihood in England is illustrated by the statement of a magazine writer that there are 300,000 families in London who are in the habit of pawning small articles and that more than 6,000,000 unclaimed pledges are sold every year in that city, while over 270,000,000 are taken in pledge in the course of the year throughout the country. Of course, some of these pledges are of stolen goods, but the writer estimates that they do not exceed more than one in 14,000.

Eight million acres of government land was taken up by settlers in Dakota last year, according to the report of the land commissioner at Washington. As no person can take more than three hundred and twenty acres (a pre-emption or homestead and a timber claim), this means that not less than twenty-five thousand, and probably thirty-five thousand farmers located in Dakota, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1883, upon government lands alone, without taking into calculation the millions of acres sold from the railroad land grants.

In Mexico nearly every one is a smoker. The school children who have done well in their studies are rewarded by being allowed to smoke a cigar as they stand or sit at their lessons. The schoolmaster is seldom without a cigar in his mouth. In the law courts all persons commonly enjoy their tobacco freely, and even the accused in a criminal trial is not denied this indulgence, but is allowed, if his cigarette goes out in the heat of the argument, to light it again by borrowing that of the officer who stands at his side to guard him.

Insects in Bricks.

Having occasion in San Francisco to examine a brick that was taken from an old ruined and forsaken building which was being torn down to make room for a handsome business block, a reporter was somewhat startled upon adjusting a microscope to see each pore of the brick inhabited with a peculiar rod-like animalcule of the genus bacilli. As these insects cannot be seen other than by the microscope, even when they live in the human system and prey upon our vitality, neither are they visible in the soil or substance in which they may live and live, except by a powerful glass. Their motions when exposed to blows were as the link of a chain, reminding one of a system of joints to be extended and contracted. They were semi-transparent, with a slight, scintillating column nearly two-thirds their length, extending from nearly their head to their pointed tails, probably their spinal column. As this brick was from the foundation and being underground and next to the street sidewalk, it illustrates forcibly the fact that however hard burnt and well made, porous substances should not be put underground for foundations or sewers. Solid rock, or concrete, or terra cotta are the only proper building materials below the level of the sidewalk.

Two of them were performing duties at the time to which they were unaccustomed, and their inexperience, the Secretary believes, was partly accountable for the occurrence. With regard to the $10,000 in canceled notes found in the canceling room, Treasurer Wyman gives a detailed explanation of how the loss probably occurred, and while admitting the carelessness of the employees concerned, speaks highly of their character and general conduct.

An Interesting Wager.

The saloons of most ferry boats are abundantly furnished with mirrors. A mischievous lady once remarked to a gentleman accompanying her that she would wager a pair of kid gloves that every man who passed through the cabin would glance into the mirror, while the women would not. The gentleman, with an incredulous smile, accepted the wager at once, and each person was noticed, and true enough, as each young, middle-aged and old man came forward toward the mirror he glanced in, many with a self-satisfied gaze, because of their good looks, jaunty clothes or fine physiques, while others seemed to wear a contemptuous curl of the lip, as if angry at themselves; but not a single woman, young, middle-aged or old, homely or pretty, good, bad or indifferent, glanced into the mirror. After at least three hundred persons had passed through, the gentleman, in a half dazed way, remarked to his companion: "You have won the gloves, but I never would have believed it. I wonder why it is."

A Woman's Threat.

A very handsome senorita went to one of the best photographers in Madrid lately to have her picture taken. When the posture was all settled, and the cloth was about to be drawn, the artist threw a last glance at his subject, and to his consternation found that she was holding a pistol to her head.

"What are you doing?" he cried. "You will not shoot yourself? It would ruin my business; besides it would be wicked to mar so lovely a face as yours, senorita."

"Do not be afraid," she replied; "I have no intention of spoiling the original of one of your best pictures; but my love has left me, and I'm going to send him my photograph in this posture, with the message that I'll fire if he does not return to me at once."

A few weeks after the photographer had the pleasure of taking the portraits of a young married pair—with out the pistol.

The Quick, complete cure, annoying Kidney, Bladder, Urinary Diseases. S. I. Druggists.

No Rest Day or Night.

In the fall of 1875 my sufferings were terrible. I was swollen to such proportions that I feared my limbs would burst. I had the best medical talent obtainable, and at the worst stage of my illness, when my husband and many friends had given me up to die, the late Dr. John Woodbury made a thorough examination of my water, and pronounced my case acute kidney disease, bordering on Bright's disease, and accompanied by gravel, and recommended the immediate use of Hunt's Remedy. At this time I was suffering most terrible pain in my back, limbs and head, and could find no rest day or night for weeks, and I was growing weaker daily until this kind physician ordered me to take Hunt's Remedy. Before taking half of one bottle I commenced to improve, and after taking six bottles was entirely cured. This was nearly eight years ago, and I have had no return of the disease. I have recommended Hunt's Remedy to others in similar cases, and it has never failed to cure. I have also used it for sick headache, and found in it a sure relief. I think it the best medicine made, and cheerfully recommend it to all.

I have used it for years.

Another Life Saved.

J. C. Gray, of Dadeville, Ala., writes us: "I have been using your Dr. Wm. Hall's Balm for the lungs, and I can say, of a truth, it is far superior to any other lung preparation in the world. My mother was confined to her bed four weeks with a cough, and had every attention by good physicians as there are in the country, and they all failed to effect a cure; but when I got one bottle of your Dr. Wm. Hall's Balm for the lungs, she began to mend right away. I can say in truth, that it was the means of saving her life. I knew of five cases that Dr. Wm. Hall's Balm had cured, and my mother is better now than she has been before for twenty years."
