THE ELECTIONS!

New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, Mississippi DEMOCRATIC!

Pennsylvania, Massachusetts Republican.

The result of the elections last Tuesday show that the democrats are in good fighting trim. The old time republican majority of the Keystone state exists no longer, in spite of the union of the factions. New York, New Jersey and Maryland remain democratic, and Virginia is believed to have been redeemed from the clutches of Mahone. This with Ohio will do for a starter for 1884.

Hensel's Opinion.
Special dispatch to the Harrisburg Patriot.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—12.10 A.M.
The republican majority in Philadelphia exceeds the most sanguine calculations. It wipes out all our estimated majority, but the country districts held up to our figures, and until the western counties are heard from, I do not concede the state to the opposition.

W. U. HENSEL.

Now that Senator Stewart favors "Blaine of Maine" for President the way to the White House seems entirely clear for the plumed knight—of course.

The six leading agricultural productions of the United States, according to the census report of 1880, were in the following order: Corn, wheat, hay, cotton, oats and potatoes. The value of the first was $600,000,000; of wheat $500,000,000; hay, $300,000,000; cotton, $242,000,000; oats, $130,000,000; potatoes, $73,000,000.

The new faced time pieces to indicate as high as 24 o'clock, will go into effect November 18, on 78,000 miles of railroad. All the old clocks will be overhauled and their works changed. The Pennsylvania road will re-number its dial.

Miscellaneous.

A Nebraska thief devotes his time entirely to the larceny of hogs, and with great success. He goes forth by night armed with a long stick, to which a sponge is fastened and a bottle of chloroform. The porcine victim is lulled to rest by the anesthetic and then borne silently away. The other night one of the slumbering hogs rolled out of the thief's wagon. A kind hearted farmer who came along the road assisted the thief to load it up again, amid profuse thanks. When the farmer reached home he discovered that the pig was from his own sty.

A Beautiful Paragraph.

We have not seen or read anything this long time quite so beautiful, chaste and elevated as the following paragraph clipped from the Sunbury Democrat of a recent date. It was written by a correspondent who signs himself "H."

Monday evening was one fit to inspire the musician with heavenly melody, worthy to draw the poet's muse into utterings of wondrous beauty and to enliven the artist's pencil into portrayals lofty in feeling and exquisite in expression. The rain of two days before had given a freshness and coolness to the air, the autumn breeze had wafted away the last trace of lingering clouds, and the moon, near its full, with an intensity approaching earnestness, beamed such a treasure of shimmering rays upon all nature as seemed almost like an expression of living friendship. The air was exquisitely clear, and its autumn crispness lent additional lustre to the glorious moonlight and the merry twinkle of the stars. The hills on the left cast long, dark shadows, while those to the right were resplendent in the glory of the night. The undulations and varying character of the landscape; the spreading fields, here yellow in corn, there green with pasture; an occasional farm-house, light, solitary and star-like amidst the shade of surrounding trees; the road winding its sinuous way along until curving out of view; overhead, the glorious ethereal dome, arching from horizon to horizon, shading in color from the mighty to the fine, delicate, pervading blue of the west—all combined to form a picture of glorious beauty and quiet magnificence, which, luring one into the peaceful country away from the town, awoke feelings whose only pain arose from the feebleness of human utterance, the wealth of realization that must be hidden under the inadequacy of words.

HOW THEY DO IT.

The manner in which Newspapers obtain their Most Interesting Reading—An Excellent Illustration of it.

Few positions in journalism are so important as that of the "exchange editor." To those that are unsophisticated into the workings of a large newspaper, it may be stated that the "exchange" editor is a man who uses the scissors and paste-pot. All newspapers of metropolitan pretensions have exchange lists of papers. They send their paper to all the leading journals in the country, besides to a number of country papers in the immediate vicinity. Every one of these papers are read by the exchange editor, and if he finds something novel and interesting, he cuts it and credits to the paper from which it is taken. When he gets a number of these clippings, he hands them to the managing editor to make a selection from. The latter chooses the most interesting of them, and those published in the paper upon the following day.

Some newspapers use more clippings than others. In a large city, like New York, where interesting news is plenty, few are needed, as the columns are well crowded without. In Cincinnati, St. Louis and cities further west, the paper will be found well filled with them and there is no mistake but that they make mighty good reading.

For instance, the following enterprising story, which is from the Pittsburgh Dispatch, a journal which is extensively copied, has been going the rounds of the newspapers:

"Very seldom do we read of an actual case of recovery, where hope had altogether been lost, parallel to which was soon Monday investigated by a Dispatch reporter who had heard in various quarters persons talking to their friends of a cure, seemingly little short of marvelous, that had been performed. The plain fact in the case referred to, without exaggeration, are these, as they were learned from the mother of the young man, his pastor and other persons well known in the community:

"William Lincoln Curtis is the name of the young man in question. He is now employed at H. K. Porter & Co.'s locomotive works in Pittsburgh, Pa. A year ago he rested with his mother on Grant street. About that time he went to bed one evening with a violent pain in his shoulder, the result, he thought of a cold. The next morning the shoulder was greatly swollen, the pain intense, and aches were felt all through his system. His case was speedily developed into a violent form of chronic rheumatism, among the first notable features of which was the paralysis of his left arm.

He gradually grew worse, and in a few months the elbow and knee joints, and both ankles became enormously enlarged. In March last the cheek bones began to enlarge, and upon his left side particularly, spreading his face out of all resemblance to his former self. The pain in all his joints became intense; fever, with its deteriorating effects, was now added, and he became rapidly reduced to the semblance of a skeleton, while vitality reached its lowest possible condition, and his sufferings were of such an indescribable character that those who most loved him sometimes thought it would be better if he was called away. At this time a physician, well known in Pittsburgh informed his parents that he was in imminent danger of total paralysis, and directly afterward they announced to his sorrowful mother that they could give no hopes of recovery.

The young man finally commenced taking that wonderful medicine, PERCINA. Almost at once the good effects were perceptible. In two weeks quite a change for the better, was perceptible by all the friends of the invalid. In six weeks almost all the enlargement had been reduced completely, while in spirits and strength the patient was quite as well as had ever been his life. Nearly three weeks ago he resumed work as a machinist at his old place, able to perform as much labor as ever in his life. "The mother of Willie Curtis in stating all these facts said: "Indeed, I cannot look upon the cure much less than amazement. I do not hesitate in sounding the praise of PERCINA, and in recommending it to all my friends. My heart is very full of gratitude for my boy's recovery was really like that of one snatched from the jaws of death."

The pastor of the church where the young man attended Sabbath school was visited, and he readily confirmed the facts of the deformed bones, the emaciated condition from disease, and of the doctors having given him up. The young man entered the minister's house with the reporter, and the pastor, who had not seen him since his recovery, was greatly surprised at his improved condition. Said he, "if he had not spoken I would not have known him."
