Chicago Convention

At the time we go to press, Friday, 11 o'clock, A. M., no news of any ballots for nominees have reached us. The Harrisburg PATRIOT in its midnight editorial, July 11, says:

The convention is still in session at this hour, midnight, and the platform as agreed on unanimously by the committee is under discussion. It is such a document as the representatives of the grand council of the democratic party ought to promulgate. It demands of the authorities those concessions to the people that the founders of the government were careful in reserve to them, and enumerates in unequivocal language the doctrines that will assure the greatest good to the greatest number. It will be adopted in the end though the

There is no noticeable change in the atitude of the candidates. Cleveland, Bayard, Randall and the others hold their relative places, though Judge Thurman's strength has been increasing. The end cannot be conjectured but there is no doubt that the issue will be satisfactory.

Supplements containa full account of the proceedings, together with the beginning of the war he was a strong and enthusiastic chap of thirty Banks once remarked of him, "Blaine always thought more of money than of the Union."

THE temperance people held their national convention in Chicago, made their platform, and nominated senator Samuel C. Pomeroy for president and John A. Conant for vice president.

Congress closed its present session of seven months and five days, last Monday at two o'clock. Its last work was the reduction of appropriations by $20, 589. 99, which is so much saved to the tax-payers. And it should not be forgotten, that it was a democratic congress, that accomplished the creditable work.

THE United States senate in passing over the trade dollar bill, shows how much they care tor the interests of thousands of business men, who took the trade dollars at full value and are now compelled to sell them at a great

THE President waited until the last day at which the bill to restore Fitz-John Porter to the army would become a law and then vetoed it. The House however passed the bill over the President's veto. But it is not likely that the Senate will.

A. WALTER, Esq., Millheim, Pa.

Dear Sir :- The undersigned, some of your neighbors and party friends in Millheim and the adjacent townships respectfully suggest, that you submit your name to the coming Democratic County Convention as & candidate for member of the legislature. Believing as they do that if nominated and elected, you would represent the people and their best interests faithfully and ably, it would afford them much pleasure to support you for said office; and their wishes and feelings regarding your proposed candidacy is no doubt shared by many more of your fellow democrats, whom they had no oppertunity to consult.

Hoping for an early and affirmative reply, we remain most respectfully your friends.

WASHINGTON LETTER

From our Regular Correspondent. WASHINGTON, D. C., July 7th, 1884. The power of Mr. Randall as a leader was again tested in the House on Tuesday when the republicans with no small number of democrats attempted to substitute the minority for the majority report on the appropriations for fortifications and defences. The report of the minority was an amendment providing for the expenditure of some $3, 000,000 in a continuance of the miserable jobbery we have already had in the war vessels turned out by John Roach -a work that has cost us $5,000,000 or more, and for which there was never a more worthless appropriation of the discussion may be protracted several people's money. Mr. Randall boldly took this bull by the horas, showing up the complicity of Chandler and others. in the gigantic scheme to rob the Government, and demonstrating the folly of going on and repeating the failures that have already cost us so much. The House, by a vote of 147 to 90 took Mr. Randall's yiews of the business and rejected Mr. Bill Clandler's overtures. The American people seem to take it ing the portraits of the for granted that for the summer months presidential candidates, at least, the President is justified in abdicating his power and leaving the Goyernment to take care of itself. Of all the line of Presidents, from Washington speeches, the platform, down to the nineteenth, Grant was the parents is seen, but too late. - Ex. and a concise account of first chief magistrate who had ever takthe candidates, will be is- en a summer junketing. Mr. Lincoln sued from this office imcasionally out at the Soldier's Home, from Youngstown, Ohio. says: Brier

Death of Allan Pinkerton.

A Brief Sketch of the Career of the Great Detective and His Agency.

CHICAGO, July 1 .- Allan Pinkerton, the well-known detective, died this af

The illness which caused the death of Allan Pinkerton was an illness of long standing. Mr. Pinkerton, who was the son of a small tradesman, was born in Glasgow in 1819, married young and left immediately for the western hemisphere. He landed in Canada, where he and his wife endured many privations. He shortly moved to the neighborhood of Dundee, Ill., where he purchased a small farm. Pinkerton was twenty-eight years of ge, and it was then that he made his irst detective ventures. Horse thieves were on the rampage in those days and Allan, after having been successful in hunting down a rascal who had stolen one of the horses, was employed by neighbors until his reputation as a detective reached the adjoining counties. He gained a more widepred reputation by hunting down forgers of checks of the Milwaukee Fire and Marine Insurance Company now Mitchell's bank]. The merchants of the country employed him to run down the other forgers. He was then invited to Chicago and was made deputy sheriff of Cook county in 1849, and in the same year Pinkerton received the appointment as special agent of the treasury under Secretary Guthrie. In this, and also in the position of mail agent, he distinguished himself by numerous brilliant pieces of detective work. The feat which gave him a national reputation was to conduct Abraham Lincoln safely through Baltimore to the inauguration in Washington. During the war Pinkerton entered the secret service of the government, and was the trusted agent of Lincoln, Stanton, Mc Clellan, Halleck, McDowell, Sherman and Grant. The first established agency was begun in Chicago in 1853. Beginning with a handful of trusted employes, Pinkerton steadily increased his business until there are now 'Pinkerton Agencies" in the principal cities of the Union, employing thousands of men and women in every state of the Union. The various agencies at present employ about 200 first-class detectives, men and women, whose pay ranges from $5 a day to $5,000 per year. The exposures of the Mollie Maguire gang, the arrest and conviction of Augustus Stuart Byron and of a young man claiming to be a nephew of Admiral Napier, ducted agency. -We daily read of defaulting clerks and cashiers, of murder and robbery, of human beings sinking into paupers' and drunkards' graves. This is the dark side of humanity. The devil has his revivals and harvests as well as the good Being. It makes the heart of man sad to behold this picture of evil and darkness, and doubly so to see many under the same baleful influences, and on the same downward course. However, it is cheerful to look on the bright side, to behold the thousands of honest clerks, honest cashiers, the thousands who do not murder and rob, the thousands who do not occupy dishonored graves, and the millions who belong to the christian church. This is the good Being's revival. Has it ever entered into the heart of man why so many are on the dark side of life? If such men's history were known, the cause of their downfall in ninety-nine caces out of every hundred, could be traced to their Youth. There was their proper training neglected, associations were formed which were bad, perhaps the first cent stolen, the first drink taken, parents careless and not chiding them properly, and giving them license to do almost as they please; and when character is gone, honor lost, the system a wreck mentally and physically, the error of
