A Crash and a Fire.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 1.-An unusually destructive freight wreck occurred on the Cleveland and Pittsburg railroad, at Summitvile, 70 miles from Pittsburg, about 11 o'clock last night. The east bound frieght, No. 16, was running along on schedule time enroute to this city. When near Summitville the first Buy Direct from the Manufacturer. section parted. The two portions were run together again and the locomotive was backed up to make a new coupling. Before the train was ready to pull out and continue on its course, the second section which was following closely, rounded the curve. It was a heavy train and had attained such an impetus that the engingeer wass unable to check its speed. It crashed into the first section with terrific force. Nearly all the cars on both of the trains were thrown off the track. The two heavy freight locomotives were hurled over on their sides and in another moment were par tially hidden from view by the debris of the broken cars and their contents, which were heaped around them.

A few moments after the wreck occurred the cars caught fire. The flames spread so rapidly that the entire mass of cars, merchandise and locomotives were enveloped by fire. There were no crews at hand to extinguish the fire, and it gradually subsided for want of fuel. The locomotives were so badly damaged as to be rendered useless. Sixteen frieght cars and one caboose were de stroyed by the fire. Ten of the cars were empty, one was loaded with flour and feed, one with onions, one with fire clay and three with iron ore. A car load of hides was saved from the flames. The trainmen of the first; section were out on the track when the collision occurred and they escaped uninjured. The crew of the second section also succeeded in escaping unhurt.

IT GOT HERE.

The Cold-wave Man No Longer Melancholy and Dejected.

The cold-wave man can now laugh all over his broad countenance like the jolly moon on a frosty night. If he hasn't got his work in at last, no one ever did since the world begun. There is something like business about the cold snap this time. It doesn't come sickly and feeble, with its back half broken, and flit away in the dead of night, but it comes with a defiance and a stiff back that makes people stoop to it with deference. Weather like this inspires a sentiment of respect in the people. It has the quality of being genuine and free from any nonsense. In the night the wind blew in a gale from the northwest with a force that bang, and tin roofs howl. It was a bad night for sleep. It got colder on the principle of geometrical progression. Every hour was nearly twice as cold as the hour before. Yesterday morning it felt like genuine winter. The cars rolled along with a hollow sound, the air nipped noses and cars, and it took the ordinary thoughtless person to be out of doors not much over five or ten minutes to tad out how cold it was. Yesterday morning was the coldest we have had this year, and the cold wave authorities have had the satisfaction of hitting it for once. The rapid changes in temperature which have occurred at intervals through the fall months are unprecedented for frequency, and it is particulary severe on persons exposed. Car drivers, conductors and policemen are most disposed to howl over the ingratitude of the weather, but their moanings are of no avail .- Patriot .

DYINGFROM EXPOSURE.

A Woman Falls From a Bridge and Unable to Walk, Freezes to Death.

READING, Pa., Dec. 2. - Polly Stump aged about 55 years, was found dead near the Schuylkill and Lehigh Railroad at Lenhartsville, this county. She was on her way home from the village store, and was walking on the railroad, when she fell through a bridge and broke her leg. After the accident she crawled on her hands and knees about two hundred yards when she became exhausted and could drag herself no farther, owing to weakness and her lacerated hands. Night coming on, she laid down, with the temperature at ten degrees above zero, and died before morning. When her body was found foul play was at first suspected. Squire Leiby immediately summoned a jury, who rendered a verdict this morning that deceased came to her death from cold and exposure after falling from the bridge.
