WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular correspondent.) WASHINGTON, May 16th, 1887.

The country youth or maiden who reads of the happy lot of the govern-ment clerk here, with his salary of from dant leisure, and with the great advantages, social, literary, and spectacular, which life at the Capital affords, is filled with longing. If the country youth and maiden are not angels, they may even be filled with envy. The enchantment which distance lends to alleged happy lots is often provocative of envy. Perhaps the only happy lot is the little one of six by three feet upon which daisies cluster, but in which there is enchantment only for those who have seen iridesecnt bubbles of life burst at the touch, including even the bubble of a government position. But this is a in progress. digression from the strait and narrow path of a Washington correspondent. Your corre pondent wishes to explain that he was not discharged, he resigned and retired into the business of journalism, and I look on my experience as a Government clerk without envy or longing. But to the average ex-clerk the retrospect is much less enviable now, than it was in 1873. Perhaps the greatest ill and the terror of youth is the school examination. Oh! dost thou remember? Think of a life of protracted school examinations! Such is to be future life of the Government clerk! He may no longer drive his pen in peace, or furtively read his newspaper. President Cleveland has decreed that he shall stand an examination for promotion, wether he wants promotion or not, and that if he fails to reach an average of 75 per cent, he must step down and out. Saints, sinners and the Beecher family! Blaine, Mahone, Conkling and all those | value of the machinery may be gather illustrious spoilers pensioned upon the Treasury in the riotous days of reconstruction and carpet bags.

The very idea of a competitive examination is quite paralyzing, for they know little spelling, and less arithmetic. Geography, mahogany, physics and hysterics are all the same to them. There has been an increased demand for school books in Washington dur ing the past week, and the Capital of the United States is likely to be the paradise of pedagogues. Already they have advertised to prepare applicants for civil service examination. But the fact remains that an education cannot be improvised, and the middle aged Republican clerks who have impaired their minds as well as their hearts in straining to keep alive the memories and the policy of the war, have no vitality for the study of text books.

General Orders. No. 7. HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF PENN-SYLVANIA, GRAND ARMY OF THE RE-

PUBLIC, No. 1210 CHESTNUT ST.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2d, 1887. The seasons of the year have again run their course, and we are hastening or to another Memorial Day. As in the past, so let us now prepare to perform with tender and loving hearts the sacred duties of the day, that the memory of our dead comrades may be held in ever increasing honor, that the cause to which, in the hour of a nation's peril, we devoted our lives on the land and on the sea, may grow in glory and renown, and that posterity may until the eost at which American liberty was preserved, and resolve that it shall be maintained as long as the world endures. The time will soon come when all perso al grief growing out of the death of those who fought in the civil war to maintain the National Union shall cease, but the time will never come as long as humanity remains faithful to its destiny when the achievements of the Union army will be in lustre, and its sacrifices, its valor and its heroism will more and more command the reverent admiration of a grateful people as the ages roll on to eternity. Memorial Day must, therefore, become less a day for sorrowing than a day for sacred and profound rejoicing that Liberty is a priceless possession, and that in every time of need those who enjoy it will sacrifice all, suffer all and Corns, etc.

dare all to maintain and preserve it. Let us, therefore, on the coming 30th day of May observe it not as a day of sorrow, but as a joyous festival of patriotism. Let us strew with flowers the graves of our dead comrades, not as a memorial of their death but in thanksgiving to God for the example of their heroic lives, and as an inspiration to coming generations to emulate their sublime devotion to their country's cause, to manity.

offered elsewhere. Again, you will find that our prices are just as low as the lowest asked by other merchants. The fact that we mean what we say will be apparent as soon as you enter our establishment. Last, but not least by any means, you will find our store brimful of everything belonging on the shelves of a first-class gneral merchandise house.
