The maintenance of the late hour this afternoon a sensational statu quo in the money and business affairs of the next few months will largely depend upon his use of the power in his hands. The present heavy speculative enter-prises are regarded among Treasury officers as indicating too much expansion, money being abundant and ready to jump at the most chimerical schemes. It is thought that the accumulation of the surplus will operate as a check upon this. In event of too great contraction one of the two expe-dients, anticipating interest or buying bonds will be resorted to.
