In 1793—differences of Entrances in favor of New-York.

Vessels from foreign ports,	151
Coasters,	407
In 1793—differences of square rigged vessels in favor of Philadelphia. [The others not being distinguished from the Coasters]	89
Difference in the Coasting trade not ascertained.
Total difference in Entrances favor of New-York, in 1793,	1009
Total difference of clearances in favor of New-York,	973

From the foregoing returns at the Custom-House, these remarks naturally follow:

1. THAT the entrances of square rigged vessels at Philadelphia from foreign ports are more numerous in 1793, than 1791; whereas those in New-York are less; the other vessels are not distinguished in the Philadelphia return from the coasters, so that a comparative view of the trade is incomplete. The fatal sickness in Philadelphia the summer past, and the French ships of war on our coast, and especially in New-York harbor, may have been causes of these differences in the foreign trade.

2. We remark an astonishing increase of the coasting trade of New-York; the difference between the years 1791 & 1793 being no less than 248 entrances. The editor has not materials for determining the exports from Philadelphia and New-York the year past; but for the year ending Sept. 31, 1791, the exports from Pennsylvania exceeded those of New-York.

From Pennsylvania,	2,931,624 dollars
New-York,	2,516,197

Diff. in fav. of Penn. 0,415,427
All the produce exported must come to market by land or water. If there are 400 entrances of coasters at New-York more than at Philadelphia, the expense of transporting these 400 cargoes by land, is saved, and this saving is in favor of the husbandman and manufacturer.* Each of these cargoes may be estimated at 60 tons? total of 24,000 cargoes, 24,000 — on each of which water transportation must save a considerable expense. Not to mention the advantage of raising up a body of seamen, by means of the coasting trade.

The Editor is happy to have it in his power to contrast the commerce of these cities, with that of certain Cities in Spain.

Entered at Barcelona in 1782 — 628 vessels, of which 317 belonged to Spain, At Alicante in do. 961 — 600 of them Spanish. At Malaga in do. 842 — about 100 Spanish. At Cadiz in do. 1,033 — 50 only belonging to Spain.

Yet Barcelona contains 115,000 inhabitants, and Cadiz 80,000; both much larger than either Philadelphia or New-York. Malaga is about the size of New-York. Alicante is indeed smaller, but there is no comparison between the active industry of a free people, and the languid exertions of men under oppressive governments.

* It is calculated that the difference between the prices of land and water carriage on the best roads in France, is as 1 to 150 in favor of the latter.

Gentlemen, in possession of Subscription papers for this Gazette, are requested to transmit them to the Editor's Office.
