COMMONS OF PARIS.
Thursday, Dec. 26.

Columbeau read the project of a Resolution, in which he demanded, that the Female Citizens who went to Versailles on the 5th and 6th of October 1789, and who were present at the sitting, should be distinguished by a Banner in public ceremonies.

Pacotte supported the motion, saying, that they shewed great energy on that occasion; and that without them, Liberty would have been lost. [Here the galleries murmured.]

Chaumette observed, that it was not surprizing that women displayed heroism in battle, and he mentioned Jeanne Achette, who saved the town of Beauvais.— He added, that it was not only the women who went to Versailles on the days mentioned, who contributed to the events of that time, but that all the Parisians shared in that glory. [The galleries applauded.] He demanded, that their request should be granted, but that they should not march under the standard but as employing themselves in knitting, attended by their husbands and children.

The council resolved, that those females shall have place in civic ceremonies, and that a banner shall be carried before them, bearing on one side the inscription which is on the Arch of Triumph on the Boulevard—“Thus as a vile prey they drove the tyrants before them;” and on the other—“Women of the 5th and 6th of October.”

The President read the following letter:—
“Bourdeaux, Dec. 20.
“Since my arrival, I have studied the public spirit of the people here: but have not found one Bourdelais at a revolutionary pitch. I do not pretend to judge the people; they are as every where else, good patriots, loving Liberty; but they are here too ignorant to perceive that a Republican government alone suits virtuous men.”

Yesterday, being the decades, in the Temple of Reason many hymns were sung in honor of liberty & sound Philosophy. Talifen and Habean pronounced discourses worthy of true Mountaineers; the few people who were present at this truly Republican ceremony, made the vault of the temple resound with these expressions, so often pronounced by good patriots—
Vive la Convention! Vive la Montaigne! Vive les bons Patriotes de Paris!

“I went to the Comedie in the evening; Patriotic scenes only were exhibited. The enthusiasm was not the same as that of the morning; the verses, the most consonant to the times, were only applauded by a very few. When the patriots called encore! the rest of the house opposed it, and stones and other things were frequently thrown upon the stage; and frequently hisses were heard—
The Mayor was obliged to request the spectators to watch the authors of the confusion.

“The good republicans complain that they do not receive all the good Journals; it will be however necessary that they should see them—for the number of the disaffected is so great, that too much precaution cannot be taken to counteract their criminal projects; as to myself be assured I will neglect nothing to enlighten my fellow-citizens, and to propagate the love of Liberty and Equality.
