BY MATHEW CAREY, No. 118,
Market-Street,
An Essay on Slavery,
Designed to exhibit in a new point of view its effects on morals, industry, and the peace of society. Some facts and calculations are offered to prove the labor of freemen to be much more productive than that of slaves; that countries are rich, powerful and happy, in proportion as the laboring people enjoy the fruits of their own labor; and hence the necessary conclusion, that slavery is impolitic as well as unjust.

Aliquid semper ad communem utilitatem afferendum.
CICERO.

The First American Edition.
THE grand principle of Equality, if rightly understood, is the only basis on which universal justice, sacred order, and perfect freedom, can be firmly built, and permanently secured. The view of it exhibited in this essay, at the same time that it repels the influence of office, the tyranny of pride, and the outrages of oppression; confirms, in the most forcible manner, the necessity of subordination, and the just demands of lawful authority. So far indeed, from loosening the bands of society, that it maintains inviolate, every natural and every civil distinction, draws more closely every social tie, unites in one harmonious and justly proportioned system, and brings men together on the even ground of the inherent rights of human nature, of reciprocal obligation, and of a common relation to the community.

BOSTON, April 12.
HUMANE SOCIETY.
At a late meeting of the Trustees of the Humane Society, information of the following event was given to them, and fully authenticated.

On the 26th of March last, about 1 o'clock, P. M. as Mr. Stephen Twist and Mr. Hopetill Bradlee, both soldiers of the Garrison at the Castle, were fishing in a small canoe, between Long-Island head and the east point of Spectacle-Island, they were suddenly overtaken with a heavy squall of wind, which induced them to attempt gaining the shore with all possible speed. While they were endeavoring to accomplish this, against an high sea and a severe fret of wind, they descried something at the distance of two or three hundred yards from them, which they soon concluded to be the head of a man. They instantly determined to go to his relief, hazardous as the attempt was; and tacking about soon came near him. Here they paused for a moment, and with great presence of mind required from the man an absolute and sacred promise, that he would not attempt to touch their canoe except in the manner which they should prescribe—as seizing it imprudently might destroy them as well as himself.

This promise he made them—and when they came to him he desired them to save his little son, of about six years old, whom he was holding in his arms. Him they took in at the head of the canoe. Mr. Twist then turning it round and directing Bradlee with the child to lie down in the head, he drew the man gently into the canoe, at the stern, and then made for the shore of Spectacle-Island, which, notwithstanding the violence of the wind, they reached in safety. Here they were received by the people of the Island with the utmost kindness and hospitality, and after divers applications the child, who appeared perfectly dead when brought on shore, was restored to animation.

The persons saved, were Mr. Thomas Barnes of this town, and his son. Mr. Barnes relates, that the boat in which he and his son with Mr. William Brown and Mr. John Dailey (both also of this town) were, was sunk at the first coming up of the squall; that he caught his son as the boat was sinking, and providentially seized the top of the mast, (which was two feet under water) with one hand—by this he held fast, while he clasped his child to his bosom with the other. In this situation he remained more than half an hour, before the canoe came to his relief. The two men, Mr. Brown and Mr. Dailey, attempted to swim to Long-Island, but failed in the attempt, and were both drowned.

The Trustees gave to Mr. Twist, (who was principally active in the business) a reward of ten dollars; and to Mr. Bradlee a reward of five dollars—for their signal exertions on this occasion—and directed this account to be published to their honor, to induce others to imitate the humanity, enterprise, and prudence of these worthy men.
