BY MATHEW CAREY, No. 118,
Market-Street,

An Essay on Slavery,

Designed to exhibit in a new point of view its effects on morals, industry, and the peace of society. Some facts and calculations are offered to prove the labor of freemen to be much more productive than that of slaves; that countries are rich, powerful and happy, in proportion as the laboring people enjoy the fruits of their own labor; and hence the necessary conclusion, that slavery is impolitic as well as unjust.

DREADFUL ACCIDENT.

Monday night the Royal family went to the little Hay Market Theatre for the first time this season. A most afflicting scene occurred at the opening of the doors. The expectation of their Majesties' presence drew the usual crowd, and on opening the doors, the torrent broke in with impetuosity. At the entry of the theatre there is an ill contrived descending stair to the pit; on which some of the foremost of the multitude lost their feet and fell; the crowd pressed over them with that thoughtless fury which in such a moment no compassion can touch, no eloquence soften. Our readers will hear it with horror! in this way, seventeen human beings were trodden to death! exclusive of those, who being recovered from the effects of suffocation, are scarcely expected to survive the bruises which they sustained under the pressure of the eager, unthinking crowd, whose sympathy was extinguished in their curiosity. The confusion lasted for half an hour, and for all that time no possible aid could be given to the victims. As soon as possible the bodies were carried to the adjoining houses; seven of them to Mr. Windes, the druggist, two or three of them to Messrs. Longman and Broderip's, and the rest to other houses in the neighbourhood, where all the means recommended by the Humane Society were tried to restore animation in vain. But one person out of all the victims were recovered. Several of them were immediately recognized as having lived in the neighbourhood, and nine were taken to St. Martin's work house, where four of them were owned; five still remain there whole names are unknown.

The accident did not interrupt the performance; the house was quite crowded with the Beau Monde, and the pieces went off with great laughter and applause. It was said the shocking event was not made known to their Majesties till next morning.

The following is a list of the dead, as accurate as we can at present produce:

Mr. and Mrs. Bradden, of Size-lane.
Mrs. Hartwell, Bridge-Street.
A Nephew of Mrs. Bradden.
Mrs. Edgar and daughter, of Pall-Mall.
Mrs. Spencer, of St. James' Market.
Mr. Robinson, of Clerkenwell.
Mrs. Fisher and two Ladies, names unknown, of Norris-street.
Mr. Brooke, of the Herald's-office.
Mr. Pigan of ditto.
Captain Garbut, of the Merchantman
Three Sisters, of Whitby.

There were some others, whose names are not known, but who were taken by their friends from St. Martin's work-house. One remained there last night un-owned.

Mr. Bradden was so much hurt, that surgeons despair of his recovery.
