An Essay on Slavery, Designed to exhibit in a new point of view its effects on morals, industry, and the peace of society. Some facts and calculations are offered to prove the labor of freemen to be much more productive than that of slaves; that countries are rich, powerful and happy, in proportion as the laboring people enjoy the fruits of their own labor; and hence the necessary conclusion, that slavery is impolitic as well as unjust.

MR. FENNO,
Please to insert the following, occasioned by reading "an Address" to the Young Ladies of Mr. Poor's Academy.—
*WHILE Mr. S—, says such charming things,
And some in verse, and some in prose he sings—
Would he, to his wise counsels give success,
He must example add to his "Address."
If he believes our sex, surpass his own,
Say, would he in his carriage ride alone?*
BELINDA.

MR. FENNO,
A certain adventurer, advertised in one of the morning papers of Monday, "that the 4th ascension which has been announced, cannot take place in Philadelphia. The iron cylinders, which were supposed to be tolerable good, have been tried this day, and found to be all good for nothing, as they let out the inflammable on all sides."
"M. Blanchard renounces all aerostatic experiments in this country, until the arts are brought to such perfection as to furnish him the means necessary to ensure success."

*Good Monsieur B—, sure 'tis somewhat strange,
That after having gull'd us of our change,
By eagles, chariots, balloons, puppet shows;
You then should twist us of our ignorance, Say, we don't know so much as folks in France,
That Science here's a babe, without her shoes,
Because, your gaz, doth thro' east iron ooze Know, balloon-man, you should have call'd for steel—
You did not know we make it!—know—and feel.*

*When o'er th' Atlantic, Buffon cast his eye,
And swore our people were but three feet high;
The climate had the men to pigmies whit-tled,
A single poet, or a man of science,
To show—he bid America defiance, The mind and stature both, were so "belittled."
Buffon we could forgive—a slave at home;
But kinder fate permitted you to roam—
Here you may see, if not a partial-fy,
Some men, not one whit smaller than yourself.*

they had this day, examined the bill, entitled, "An act to erect a light-house on the head land of Cape Hatteras; and a lighted beacon on Shell Castle Island in the State of North-Carolina," and that it was duly enrolled.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Beckley their Clerk:
"Mr. President—The President of the United States hath notified the House of Representatives, that he this day approved and signed the following acts—"An act providing for the raising & organizing a corps of artilleryists and engineers" "An
