An Essay on Slavery,

Designed to exhibit in a new point of view its effects on morals, industry, and the peace of society. Some facts and calculations are offered to prove the labor of freemen to be much more productive than that of slaves; that countries are rich, powerful and happy, in proportion as the laboring people enjoy the fruits of their own labor; and hence the necessary conclusion, that slavery is impolitic as well as unjust.

Charlotte, a tale of Truth,
IN TWO VOLUMES.
By Mrs. ROWSON, of the New Theatre, Philadelphia, Author of Victoria, the Inquisitor, the Fille de Chambre, &c.
Of Charlotte, the Reviewers have given the following character.
IT may be a Tale of Truth, for it is not unusual, and it is a tale of real distress.— Charlotte, by the artifice of a teacher, recommended to a school, from humanity rather than a conviction of her integrity, or the regularity of her former conduct, is enticed from her governess, and accompanies a young officer to America.—The marriage ceremony, if not forgotten, is postponed, and Charlotte dies a martyr to the inconstancy of the lover, and treachery of his friend.—The situations are artless and affecting—the descriptions natural and pathetic; we should feel for Charlotte if such a person ever existed, who for one error scarcely, perhaps, deserved so severe a punishment. If it is a fiction, poetic justice is not, we think, properly distributed.
Said Carey has just published,

CONGRESS.
House of Representatives.
Friday, May 9.

[Mr. W. Smith's Speech Concluded.]
It had been proposed that in lieu of these stamp duties, the duties of impost should be increased on all articles which now pay a duty of seven and a half per cent ad valorem, to ten per cent. besides the increased rates of duties on the enumerated articles. It was not a little surprizing, he observed, that gentlemen who a few days ago predicted an approaching war, whereby our existing revenue arising from impost would be almost annihilated, should now not only count upon the continuance of that revenue, but should expect further aid from that source, or that those who are urging a suspension of commercial intercourse should rely upon commerce altogether for revenue. He was decidedly of opinion, that commerce was already sufficiently burthened, and that it would be as unjust as impolitic to add to the burden. We ought not to rely upon the proposed duties on the enumerated articles, which with the proposed increase of tonnage constituted an item of near 400,000 dollars.—This he considered, under present circumstances, a very precarious resource. With respect to the other new sources of revenue, being untried, they were uncertain; the house possessed no data by which any accurate estimate could be made of their product; under all these circumstances, while on the one hand, the existing revenues would fall short of those of former years, and the new revenues were either precarious or uncertain as to their amount, and on the other hand our expences were necessarily much increased, and were likely to be still further increased, he was confident the house would be sensible of the propriety of negating the motion. would be some difficulty in carrying the tax into execution; but these difficulties were inseparable from the very nature of taxation. It required little ingenuity to discover them, and to apply to them all the common-place topics which were resorted to on these occasions. But he thought that if the gentlemen would employ their ingenuity and inventive faculties in discovering such revenues as would enable the government to face the present exigencies, they would render more service to the country, than by embarrassing with objections, which were equally applicable to almost every species of imposition.

THEATRE.
OBSERVER No. XVII.
Mr. FENNO,
On Friday evening, Mr. Bates's night, the New Theatre was filled with an unusual number—a more brilliant and genteel audience has never attended. The Du-ENNA was well performed—the parts have never been better cast, and the several performers, never did themselves more justice, in pretensions to uncommon merit.
Mr. Bates has, perhaps, succeeded better than any other Actor in the United States, in pleasing all descriptions of people—may he continue to experience their favors, in such plaudits, as his benefit afforded.

Mr. Morris's benefit was on Monday evening; and that truly deserving veteran, was notified in a very honorable, as well as beneficial manner—a good notice, in point of numbers and respectability, was never more gratified, by his performance, than by that in the character of Don Manual. This Actor, has uniformly filled his parts with great justness, but he truly filled the character Don Manuel with prodigious strength and elegance. Cibber, who wrote the play, could not have possessed a thought, which Mr. Morris did not give its full exercise. His performance of the scene after his daughter's marriage, when a mixture of extatic joy and paternal tenderness overcomes him, was
