Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON, May 21.

We hear, that it is at length finally concluded that the Princess Royal is to give her hand to the Prince of Wirtemberg. Count Z. Zepelin, it is said has been the successful suitor for his prince on the occasion.

The Austrian general Argenteau, second in command, has been arrested on a charge of misconduct during the late campaign in Italy, and is to be brought to a court martial. He is a prisoner at Mantua.

The report of peace is again very prevalent in London, and the return of Mr. Netmay from Paris is anxiously expected. This gentleman has been associated with M. Charretier, as agent for French prisoners in this country, and approved of as such by our Ministry. He was formerly under M. Barthelemi, in the service of the French Ambassador in London; and was sent off on Monday last night by express to Paris, supposed to be charged with a mission of importance. An express was sent off to Dover 12 hours before Mr. Netmay left London, with a letter from the Duke of Portland to the Mayor, to let this gentleman meet with no delay, and that a packet might be in readiness to receive him. He sailed from Dover to Calais under a flag of truce and was only two hours and a half on his passage. Mr. Charretier accompanied him to Dover, but not to France.

Scarce any thing of the events which have occurred in the progress of the French revolution are more extraordinary than those of the present day. Almost in the same sitting of their legislative bodies, they consult on the first movements towards peace, made by Mr. Wickham to Mr. Barthelemi, they receive news of victories decisive of the fate of Italy and the submissive proposals for peace from Sardinia and Naples, and in the same breath they announce to the people that a conspiracy has been just discovered in the perpetration, headed by men of the first abilities, some of them of the legislative body, threatening the massacre of all the constituted authorities, and the re-establishment of the bloody system of 1793.

The conspirators accuse the present powers of intending to restore the monarchy: they retort the charge on the conspirators and urge the nation to oppose the restoration of the constitution of 1793 to the utmost, as the only means of establishing the Republic and the liberty of France.

LONDON, May 30.

A letter from the Hague, of the 18th inst. says, that the Committee of Union having communicated to the National Assembly the contents of a note from Gen. Bournonville, in which he insists, that a commander in chief of the army of the State shall be appointed without delay, the Assembly nominated Gen. Bournonville to that office, and invested him with full power.

The Louis d'Or sold at Paris, on the 18th inst. for the enormous price of 8,400 livres in Assignats; and Receipts or Promises of Mandates, then bore a discount of 88 per cent.

At the close of the Poll for Westminster, on Friday, Mr. Fox and Horne Tooke addressed the mob, in pretty long speeches;—that of the former Gentleman was the most inflammatory we ever heard. He said (among other strong things) that he remembered but two Wars in which this country has been engaged—the one directed against the Liberty of America, the other against the Liberty of France—both caused by the despotic principles of the existing Governments—that the present War was nothing more, nor less than a combination of despots to overturn the liberties of Europe.—That a constitution was good, exactly in proportion to the share that the people had in the government of the country—that the sovereignty was in the people.

He cautioned the people against entertaining the fantastic notion—that an existing constitution might not be destroyed.

He spoke of Mr. H. Tooke as a gentleman, whom he respected, and whom he considered as the most injured and persecuted man alive; this speech might be called a canvass for Mr. Tooke.

Mr. H. Tooke said, that he would not continue a candidate, if he conceived, that by so doing, he would endanger Mr. Fox's election. He agreed in every single sentiment that Mr. Fox had uttered.

It is there not then a coalition in principles avowed between Mr. Fox and the Chief of the Corresponding Society.

Extract of a letter from Cadiz, April 29, 1796. I give you an abstract of a letter, dated Alicante, April 10.

On the 10th inst. an American brig came in three days from Algiers to this place; reports, that the Moors had just carried 9 Danish vessels into that port, they were all loaded, one had Sicilly ash for London, some others wine and brandy. The ground of this unexpected hostility seems to be this:—Some time ago, a Dane, bringing 300 Moors from Constantinople going to Algiers, was stopped by a Tuscan man-of-war, and carried into Naples, where the Moors are detained.—The Dey of Algiers makes Denmark answerable for them; and, we understand, that he has intimated to the Danish Consul that they must be returned within a limited time; that if they were, he would continue a friend to Denmark, and release the vessels detained, and if they were not, they would be sold and their crews made slaves; the Danish flag declared enemy, and the Consul turned out of Algiers.

As it is some time since the Consul has been writing for compromising the matter at Naples, it may be hoped he will be able to pacify the Dey, in which case the Prizes would be restored.

This intelligence may be depended upon, but however it is not improbable that you may, ere this reaches, be informed of this circumstance.

The American Treaty with the Algerines, it seems, is in great forwardness, and the Captives expected to depart daily from Algiers. Mr. Donaldson, it was likely, would be able to accommodate matters on a permanent footing with the Regency of Tunis and Tripoli—and when this takes place, the Americans will have nothing more to apprehend from the Barbary powers.

From the (Bell's) NORTHERN STAR, COUNCIL OF FIVE HUNDRED.

PARIS, MAY 19.

The Council of five hundred had yesterday come to no resolution relative to the treaty concluded between the French republic and the King of Sardinia. A commission was appointed to examine it, and to deliver in their report this day. The commissioners are Boissy d'Anglas, Lemerer, Syeyes, Jean Debri, and Eschallereaux.—The Council again to day will form itself into a secret committee to receive the report.

May 20.

Dumas is the member who presented to the Council of Elders, the report in the name of the commission appointed to examine the treaty of peace concluded with Sardinia. His speech, though studied in a few hours, was a work of a considerable extent, and a well drawn picture of the present situation of Europe, and of the new relations of the republic with respect to the other powers. Of the war, Dumas spoke with professional knowledge. The plans of the campaign he praised in the highest terms, and was likewise liberal in his praise of those who concerted them, and of those also who put them in execution. He appreciated the merit due to the political dexterity of those who conducted our negotiations; and paid a tribute of applause to our generals, to the heroes of the North and of Italy; to Buonaparte, to Berthier, and those who emulate their glory. He expressed his wishes and his hopes for a speedy, wise, and honorable peace; a peace such as it becomes France to grant to Europe, that now loudly calls for a return of its blessings.

BUONAPARTE Commander in chief of the army of Italy. TO HIS BRETHREN IN ARMS. Head-Quarters, Cherasco, April 26.

SOLDIERS, You have in a fortnight gained Six victories, taken 21 stand of colours, 71 pieces of cannon, several strong places, conquered the richest part of Piedmont; you have made 15000 prisoners, and killed or wounded more than 10,000 men.

You had hitherto fought only for sterile rocks, rendered illustrious by your courage, but useless to the country; you have equalled by your services the victorious army of Holland and the Rhine. Deprived of every thing, you have supplied every thing, you have won battles without cannon, made forced marches without shoes, watched without brandy, and often without bread.—The Republican phalanxes, the soldiers of Liberty were alone capable of suffering what you have suffered.

Thanks be to you, Soldiers; the grateful country will, in part be indebted to you for her prosperity; and if when victors at Toulon, you predicted the immortal campaign of 1794, your present victories will be the prefaces of more brilliant victories. The two armies which attacked you with audacity fly disheartened before you. Men who smiled at your misery and rejoiced in thought at the idea of the triumphs of your enemies, are confounded and appalled.—But it must not, Soldiers, be concealed from you, that you have done nothing, since something remains yet to be done. Neither Turin nor Milan are in your power. The ashes of the conquerors of the Tarquins are still disgraced by the assassins of Bassville. At the commencement of the campaign you were delirious of every thing, now you are amply provided; the magazines taken from your enemies are numerous, the artillery for the field and for besieging is arrived.

Soldiers, the country has a right to expect great things from you; justify her expectations. The greatest obstacles are undoubtedly overcome, but you have still battles to fight, cities to take, rivers to pass.—Is there one among you whose courage is diminished? Is there one who would prefer returning to the fumus of the Alps and the Apennines? No, there is not one amongst the conquerors of Montenotte, Millesimo, Dego, Mondovi. All burn with the desire of extending the glory of the French. All wish to humble the proud kings who dare to meditate putting us again in chains; all wish to dictate a peace that shall be glorious, and that shall indemnify the country for the immense sacrifices which she has made; all of you burn with a desire to say on your return to your home, I belonged to the victorious army of Italy.

Friends, I promise this conquest to you, but there is one condition which you must swear to fulfil, it is to respect the people whom you deliver, to repress the horrid pillage, which some wretches infligated by our enemies, had practised; unless you do this you will be no longer the friends but the scourges of the human race; you will no longer form the honor of the French people, they will disavow you; your victories, your successes, the blood of brethren who died in battle, all, even honor and glory will be lost. With respect to myself, to the Generals who possess your confidence, we shall blush to command an army without discipline, and who admit no other law than that of force.

People of Italy, the French army comes to break your chains. The French people are the friends of all people, come with confidence to them, your property, religion, and customs shall be respected.

We make war as generous enemies; and with only to make war against the Tyrants who oppress you.

(Signed) BUONAPARTE.
