By GEORGE CAMPBELL, D. D. F. R. S. &c. Principal of Marischal College, Aberdeen. * * * The character of the author, for acuteness and erudition has been established by his essay on miracles in answer to David Hume, the greatest masterpiece of the kind ever published, and by his "Philosophy of Rhetoric," and to the merit of the present work, the result of nearly forty years study and application, and the substance of his course of lectures in his official capacity, the reviewers have given ample testimony, but their account, however honorable to the work, is too long for a place in this advertisement, the work however is now presented in an American edition at not more than half the price of the London copy. LORD TOWNSHEND.

The following additional evidence and Verdict conclude the article published yesterday.

Mr. Kerrison, apprentice to Mr. Barnham, of Oxford-street, said, that he saw the body when it was brought into his master's house; it was perfectly dead, but was yet warm; though he was not a very good judge of the matter, he believed he might say that the deceased had been dead about two hours. The wound appeared as though a pistol had been put into his mouth; a ball was extracted from the crown of his head. He could not take upon him to say, whether it was suicide, or death by the hand of another; but it might probably be suicide, as the pistol must have been put full into the mouth, the teeth being all found.

The magistrate then desired the several persons examined to attend at five o'clock in the afternoon, as the coroner's jury would sit on the body in the evening.

A Coroner's Inquest sat at half past six o'clock in the evening, at the public house next door to Mr. Barnham's, where the dead body lay. They examined all the persons who had been before at Marlborough-street, with the addition of Lord Charles's servant, and Mr. Barnham, who extracted a ball from the top of the deceased's head. Having inspected the body, they retired to consider of the verdict in the following words: "Upon viewing the body and from the evidence obtained, it appears that the death of Lord Charles Townshend was occasioned by a pistol shot: but have no proof by whose hand the pistol was fired.—Signed for self and the rest of the jury, "THOMAS JACKSON."

EUROPEAN INTELLIGENCE.

TURIN, May 5.

Persons are desirous of knowing the circumstances which have compelled the king of Sardinia to conclude an armistice by which he surrendered himself to the French. We are assured that after the battle of Mondovi general Colli wrote to the court, that it was impossible for him, with an army disheartened and reduced nearly one half, to hold out much longer against the French. It was then that the king and his council upon the representations of the prince of Piedmont determined to ask a suspension of arms although Beau lieu was then on his march to attack the French. The French general thought of nothing less than granting a truce; however not to give simply a negative answer he proposed the conditions expressed in the treaty, not thinking that they could be accepted. In the interim Cherafco was taken by a coup de main. There then remained no place or post fortified between the French army and Turin. The French general saw the Baron de la Tour arrive, who informed him, that his Sardinian majesty had signed the articles of the Truce, and had given orders that they should be complied with as soon as possible. The king of Sardinia having no longer a sufficient army to cover Turin, saw as well the danger of remaining in the city as of leaving it. The inhabitants cried peace, peace, and very probably would not have sustained a siege. The surrender of the capital would probably have drawn after it that of other places, and the king of Sardinia would have seen the whole of Piedmont conquered and in a revolutionary state. It is supposed that the court of Turin flattered itself with obtaining an indemnification in Lombardy, and that it will offer its alliance to the French. It is true that they do not need the assistance of the Piedmontese to finish that conquest; but it may be to their interest to engage it in a war with the emperor.

The minister of the emperor, the count de Gardanne, is returned here; this has given rise to a great many conjectures. But as the court of Turin is not at war with the emperor, it is plain that a minister cannot quit his post without the express order of his court. The princesses of France who had gone from Turin, have returned thither since the signing of the truce between the French and the Piedmontese.

LONDON, May 20.

It is understood that the election will be completed, and the new Parliament meet for the dispatch of business, in the month of July.—Matters of great importance, it is expected, will then be laid before them, and the house will not rise for the recess until Autumn. Perhaps no plan could be devised, more calculated than this for the public good.

Lord Hood has taken his farewell of the electors of Westminster; informing them that his Majesty has signified his intention of conferring on him the dignity of an English Peer.

It is said that there will be many changes in the law department: Judge Ashurst and Judge Peiry to retire; Serjeants Adair and Le Blanc to be the new Judges; William Grant, Esq. to be either Attorney or Solicitor General.

Mr. John Holt, of Walton, the surveyor of Agriculture for the county of Lancaster, has been presented with a cow calf, whose dam is in the 32d year of her age; a fact which can be ascertained from certain data. And, what renders the circumstance more remarkable, the dam of the calf, whilst in the possession of the present proprietor, can never be said to have been properly out of milk for the last fifteen years. The young female calf seems very healthy, and a beautiful creature.
