To be sold,
A PLANTATION, in the town of Woodbury, county of Gloucester, and state of New-Jersey, containing about one hundred and fifty acres; a suitable proportion of which is woodland and improved meadow. A great part of the arable land is in a high state of cultivation, and very natural to the production of Red Clover.
On said plantation there is a genteel two-story brick house, with four rooms on a floor, and a good dry cellar under the whole; together with a barn, corn-cribs and carriage-house. The garden is large, and contains a good collection of the best kinds of grafted and inoculated fruit trees; the orchard consists of about three hundred grafted apples. Any person inclined to purchase said premises, may be informed of the terms by applying to Andrew Hunter.

Letters Patent,
Granted to the Subscriber, for the Cure of Incurvations and Distortions of the Spine,
By an improvement in Stays and an Apparatus.
EVERY thing has been studied to render this application safe, easy, effectual, and generally useful, and that if necessary, it may be accompanied with any other mode.

The success of the Patente in the cure of distortions, from Incurvations of the Spine, the Wry Neck, &c. in this city and in different parts of the United States, under the inspection of eminent physicians, when every other mode had failed, will, it is hoped, afford the public substantial testimony of the utility of this application.
N. B. He makes an apparatus for restoring distorted feet in children—Bandages in general—Trusses of various descriptions, and one in particular on a plan entirely new, which in some cases is found to answer better than any other.
He returns thanks to those medical gentlemen in different parts of the United States who have honored him with their patronage and confidence.
The Ladies are respectfully informed, that he has an elegant assortment of Stays and Corsets for Sale, which will be altered if necessary, free of extra charge.

A very Valuable Estate, CALLED TWITTENHAM, situate in the township of Upper Derby, and county of Delaware, 7 1-2 miles from Philadelphia, and half a mile from the new Western road: containing 230 acres of excellent land, 45 of which are good water meadow, 90 of prime woodland, and the rest arable of the first quality. There are on the premises a good two story brick house, with 4 rooms on a floor, and cellars under the whole, with a pump-well of excellent water in front; a large frame barn, stables, and other convenient buildings; a smoke-house and stone, spring-house; two good apple orchards, and one of peaches. The fields are all in clover, except those immediately under tillage, and are so laid out as to have the advantage of water in each of them, which renders it peculiarly convenient for grazing.
The situation is pleasant and healthy, and from the high cultivation of the land, the good neighbourhood, and the vicinity to the city, it is very suitable for a gentleman's country seat.
The foregoing is part of the estate of Jacob Harman, deceased, and offered for sale by

A PASTORAL.
NOW far in the west, Sol declining had fled, Had put on his night-cap, was going to bed; Mist Luna arose, with her pretty smock face, Judd peep'd thro' the grove and illum'd the place.
All posies and jambres say Laura did rove.
To where a fad rivulet pur'd thro' the grove.
The nymph was array'd in a loose dishabille.
She sigh'd to the notes of the wild whippoorwill—All nature was silent to hear her complain, But soon she fled home, for it look'd like to rain!

From a Norfolk paper.
PAIN
WITH genius vast and mind sublime Has stamp'd his thoughts upon the page of time.
The monster Custom from his throne hath hurl'd, And let in Reason on the darken'd world.
Feather'd above with a prophetic ray, Dipp'd in the Fountains of celestial day, His daring pen the "Mountain Nymph pourtray'd, In sweetest radiant her eye array'd.
Deck'd her full breast with Power's commanding robe, Plac'd at her feet the wide extended globe.
Fix'd in her hand nature's imperial rod, Hung on her neck the image of her God.
Beam'd on her reasoning front his rays intense,
And cap'd her Liberty with "Common Sense."
As deck'd by Paine, the free-born beauty moves, What eye but greets her, and what heart but loves?
As on her cheek the passing breezes warm, What hofom bows not to the blooming charm?
The People hail the stranger on her way,
The Nations bend to her celestial sway.
The Jesters' puppets tremble and complain, And vainly war with Liberty and Paine.

Paine, when he really dies, aches not the mead, Of Paul to pray, Peter to intercede; Him shall no Priest, with pious fraud, prepare, With deeds of mockery and words of air;
Nor round his tomb, perhaps, will tears be shed, Anthem be sung, funeral rites be read;
No grieving dame to aduress face be there, No lengthen'd groans shall loiter in the air;
But the great EXIT NATIONS shall proclaim, Whilst Death for once will swell the trump of fame,
And the freed soul, on Paine and Nature's plan, Shall enter Heaven by the RIGHTS of MAN!

MARIA ANTOINETTE,
Has been stigmatized as an abandoned courtesan, by the cold prudes of the north, as well as by the outrageous fish-women on the banks of the Seine and the Loire. I believe that many a Republican railer of her own sex, has "felt the heat of a luxurious bed" more frequently than this queen from the Austrian house. But as she was the spirited consort of a supine king, she preferred the glitter of an Arctis buckle to the Bonnet rouge of Democracy. This was the crime that stamped her a Mefallina. Philosophy would affirm that her voluptuousness was the fault of the age, not of the woman. If love as well as aristocracy, be voted, dangerous in France, what millions of petticoats shall we behold sagging from the lantern.

PHYSIOGNOMY.
I NEVER read 20 pages of Lavater, even in the abridged edition, but I have my whims, when I look into a man's face. Shakespeare talks somewhere, of "foreheads villainously low," and I always feel suspicious, even of sparkling eyes, if a puny nosing be underneath. The best physiognomy is where there is the best expression. The latest diamond may be found among meaner pebbles; the glitter of genius is often seen, amid the murkiest features.

CHURCH.
I ALWAYS liked an established one, with gorgeous and frequent ceremonies. If nothing harsher could be averred of the Romish mass house, than that it was adorned with paintings and sculpture, Chillingworth's book would not have sold. The great body of worshippers, throughout the universe, cannot conceive of spirituals except by the aid of sensible images. Few men are profoundly sago-cious, but all have ears and eyes. Therefore, where "deep toned organs blow," and paintings look from the wall, expect the most decent, attentive, and even believing audience.
The lawn of Bishop Watson is of finer texture than the dull grey of Calvin and John Knox. Suppose that Hume should say of Lutherans and Presbyterians, that both were jugglers, still there may be a decided preference. The acting of Garrick was better than the mummery of a Zany at St. Bartholomew's fair.

REASON.
A VERY sober faculty. But the French have infilted since the revolution, that Reason should retire from the Champ de Mars, or if the serious power must appear, that it must be in the form of an opera girl! The Goddess of Reason however demure the might seem to the mob by day, undoubtedly slept in the same bed with Tallien at night! How unlikely that French Reason was a prostitute. A courtesan, assuming the garb of virtue, and worshipped by the Parisians, was certainly that new thing under the sun, which Solomon supposed never could be. Burke's philippic was not so severe a satire against the revolution in France as that which the Goddess of Reason uttered to surrounding pikemen.

NEW ORDER OF THINGS.
THIS often means the utter destruction of old government, old order, old laws, old religion, and old virtue. That this kind of novelty might exist in France, a king and queen were murdered, a daughter starved, the clergy pillaged, and the nobility degraded. A new order of things is when the little finger of a fool is thicker than the loins of a philosopher. A new order of things is where the "rascal man" bellow in the Senate house, and where the ingenious few are under the guillotine, Satan, Cataline and Robespierre were all zealous friends to this kind of innovation.

THE FINE ARTS.
IN a Republic, the fine arts, particularly painting and sculpture, are little known, and less encouraged. In the Louvre, and the palaces of Leo-X. the beauties of a picture of Ruben's and the Apollo Belvidere will enchain the attention of a counsellor for hours; but we young Americans, in a new country scarcely know the Italian masters by their names. In the entry, perhaps, of some of the most fashionable characters in our capitals, you may recognize, beneath a cover of dust, an indifferent engraving, a copy of Hogarth. But in general, such is the vandalism of the time, a smirched daub in the Dutch manner, or the colored prints of John Overton deform our waincoats. Raphael and Michael Angelo, if they rose from the dead, and worked at the pallet in Bolton would soon either die in the alms house, starve to death in obscure lodgings, or be rode over by a hackney coachman. A witty Englishman once told me, and I believed the witty Englishman, that if the statue of Venus de Medici were advertised to be positively sold, "blow high, blow low," at the auctions in State-street, some long-wharf merchant would leave not his "bar iron and rock salt," to ward a bid of five dollars for the goddess of beauty.

From the FARMER'S WEEKLY MUSEUM.
To the right wheel.—STUBBEN.
ALTHOUGH I can't, like Sterne, turn Cap] padocia, Pontus or Phrygia, into a sermon or essay, yet, like Smollet, I never travel from Dan to Beersheba, and cry "it's all barren."—This military phras, of the able Baron's, certainly conveys more, than mechanical operation upon platoons and columns.

The art of wheeling to the right, although so often taught on milder days, has never been rightly practiced, although the world has been wheeling above four thousand years.
I recollect an anecdote of a soldier, who, after climbing a commanding eminence, so sensibly felt his elevation, that he gave words of command to kingdoms, and ordered them to wheel to the right.
Had he been obeyed, I verily believe that their maj-esties, who are now fighting, would have kept long at home in their own Courts, and made no slaughter; but at festive boards. Russia would have wheeled from the massacre of Poland; and half a score of kingdoms would have kept us ignorant of their destiny, by not giving Frenchmen an opportunity to give them chase; and his Sardinian majesty would never have laid to his armies, wheel this way or that way, or any way, if you can only wheel yourselves, and my kingdom, from the grasp of Buonaparte.

Religion has been ever wheeling—and I unluckily live in a place, where may be counted more sects than Hannah Adams ever dream'd of. In one place they hold finners under water till they are filled—with belief. In another, they find but five in fifty, that are elected to future bliss; and in another they send finners of all colors; conduct and persuasions, to the abodes of happiness;—a shrewd genius observes, than none of them wheel to the right.
The Ladies, whose roundness often renders them fine subjects for wheeling, and who have been revolving in the orbit of fashion, ever since Adam's wife stitched her apron of fig-leaves, are said, by wicked wits, not always to move right. The amoreous bosom which in modern days, has swollen prodigiously to view, and the rotund waist, so tempting to the view, are by no means signs of error; but moralists suspect that chastity has been long wheeling to the left.

Another night, as a grog-shop full of toppers, fat hiccuping their lungs, one thought of his wife and children, and made for home; a new made corporal starts up, and orders him to wheel to the right; "gad, says he, I wheel every way, and some must be right.

THE HERMIT.
From the FARMER'S WEEKLY MUSEUM.
"Yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai, the Jews, sitting at the King's Gate." NOW, had he been sitting in sackcloth and ashes, or weeping with his head covered, or "under the shade of melancholy boughs," or in any of the postures of grief and suffering, we should not be surpris'd at Haman's declaration of his uneasiness.
But at first view, it has a very odd aspect, that a Jew's seat at a gate should ruffle the temper of an Ag-agite. Whether Mordecai fat or loll'd; whether he was upright or prone, most men would have pass'd by, probably on the other side, and said not a word concerning to simple a mode of being. 'Twas an ordinary every day occurrence; and one would suppose that the Medes and Persians, as they approached the palace of their sovereigns, would have been to enquire, by schemes to obtain court favor, that they would not have observed Mordecai, or any body else, in such a posture.

But, among that parasitical herd, which naturally watched the opening of the King's gate, there was one proud and capacious mortal, whose bad heart every random arrow could wound.
"Shame on my feeble conceptions, and faltering pen, I cannot generalize the inimitable topics of Oriental narration. To elucidate my text, "I must a tale unfold." Nor shall the story suffer from my unskilfulness; for it shall be told from the BIBLE.
In the annals of the Princes of Persia, as partially detailed in the book of Esther. Ahasuerus in a fit of good humor, after a sumptuous feast, promoted Haman, by allowing him to take precedence of contemporary princes, and enjoining upon the courtiers, obsequious homage to the favorite. This, it appears was "capricious partiality to a new face," for there was nothing in this minion's character, that could recommend him to any patronage. A promotion so unmerited, though assented to, from selfish principles, by a complying court, to no one appeared more absurd than to Mordecai, one of those refugee and unhappy Jews, whom the sack of Jerusalem had compelled to be a pensioner upon bounty, in foreign climes. Lynx-eyed to discern, and bold to resent, his spirit, like his body was erect, at the sight of Haman. Enraged at this cavalier treatment from an outcast and an alien, Haman seeks, not to privately assassinate Mordecai alone, but by a master stroke of revenge to sacrifice his nation. Artfully representing to his credulous master, the disference of the Jews, their attachment to their own, and contempt of the Persian legal code, he obtained a mandate for their extinction. Behold Haman on the pinnacle of favor; the first friend of him, who reigned from India to Ethiopia, over an hundred, and seven and twenty provinces. Every selfish, every malevolent passion gratified: Selected from numerous nobles, and invited with his King to the banquet, which a humilit-ated prince, prepared. "Bearing those honors thick upon him," who would not, like Haman, on that favored day, issue forth "joyful and with a glad heart." Who would suppose that such gaiety could be instantly extinguished, and that a check could be found in for-mid career?
