A FEW comments on T. Jefferson's very ridiculous and elaborate attempt to prove that the negroes are an inferior race of animals, will place in a just light the philosophical merits of the author: The foregoing passage has been selected because it is among those which have been most admired by the author's friends.

former assertions, still believing them to be well founded. His panegyrist may choose from the above alternatives, that which may be the least injurious to his friend. He will probably attempt to vindicate the philosopher by introducing his canon which led him to recant an error.

ries of Wurms, he lopped all conference with the directory, pretending that his powers were not sufficient. Since the defeat of that general, he modestly renewed his solicitations for a peace. The apostolic Nuncio should, however, be told "that his mission is not of this world."
