For the Gazette of the United States. No. VIII. [Concluded from yesterday's Gazette.]

o the Electors of the Prefident of the United States. In the antient limited monarchies, the whole mals the unnobled people, were gathered as upon an merican election day to co operate in legislation ith the hereditary orders. The demarcations of ower among the three branches were loole, imper-& and incorrect. The awful and important judior and incorrect. The awing and important judi-ary powers were not fixed. In America the prin-ples are much better known, the practice is far operior and the effects correspondingly happy and worable. The judiciary power, under the gene-il government, is more completely separated and dependent than in any former inflance, much ore fo than in England—an incalculable bleffing-or truly and most emphatically may it be faid, that a judiciary power, under a free written conflituon, is the fleet anchor of the political veilel. The, reditary sourt of appeals blended with the legif-ive power and including the impediments to jufe towards those, who are not rich, from the im ense expence, and to all suitors, from delay, as ablished in the house of lords, is far indeed from isfactory—and the tenure of the very important tion of the lord high chancellor, at the pleafure the crown, is a far more dengerous departure on the division and balance of political powers an is to be found in the American conflictution.

But are the fuber and reflected objections to the But are the lober and reflected objections to the ereditary powers of kings and nobles refolvable no a "mechanical" horror against names, having o reafonble foundation? Are they a more extra-agant, passion feeling into which mankind have worked themfelves up? Are the objections to or-ers or ranks, exalting a few to the depression of he reft of a nation no better grounded, than a na-irral antipathy to an unpleasant found? Or are wolf objections as extraverant and defined fe objections, as extravegant and fidiculous as the ciful emotions of a man would be, who thould aceive himfelf to have been born with a natural or heal antipathy to a pretty innocent ribbond of , blue, or green? But what shall be thought of republicanism of the implication, that the dif schifed inhabitants of any kingdom have little ore ground of complaint against the conflicution, an a certain mechanical. extravagant feeling or

They cannot be fo well tested, as y flewing a contrasted cafe. If one were to pro-offer to change our fingle executive, choice by be boards of electors, into an executive council of the proof the people of the memren, cholen yearly by the joint votes of the mem-rs of the federal fenate and house of reprefentaes-1f he were no propole annual fensions, in-al of the prefent term-If the fame perfon were at of the pretent term - If the tame period were urge the veffing of the powers of a court of ancery in a fole judge, to be annually appointed the executive council, he would be juffly confi-red as unfriendly to the efficiency and flability of government, or, in other words, as an enemy the federal confliction. If, inflead of an ex-live council, chofen by the legiflature, the detion from the happy mode of electing our fin-magiftrate were in the opposite extreme, and hereditary king be indicated, foretold, reprefen-as inevitable and infinuated; and if initead of d as inevitable and infinuated; and it initead of inual fenators, the deviation from our prefent ode of appointing fenators, were alfo in the op-blite extreme, and a corps of hereditary nobles, ith high judicial powers over life, liberty and pro-erty, were commended as of unexampled excel-ncy, do not fuch perfons infenfibly betray themfelves ito the like fituation of baffility to the confliction of the United States, and to aver brefens teangality ? the United States, and to our prefent tr. If this matter becarried a flep forther, and it be pliedly recommended by an example of a very all ming nature, and by the approbation of that ex-ple, in terms of the molt plain and decided force, vary our conflitution as to the great and all-imrtant alternative, power, the matter is rendered I more ferious. This observation is made in reence to the following extract from the 34th page the pamphlet in reply to Mr. Paine, which is wunder confideration. "The very act (fays writer) by which septennial parliaments were es-listed in England, affords sufficient proof, that e power of altering the conditiution itself ought be delegated, and even exercifed by the government, on certain critical occafions." Is not this obvation to the Americans, taken with the former otation, an evidence of a defire to affimilate our teral conflitution to that of England? And if a clident be prepared for any other change, might a bare majority of a future fenate and house of refentatives, in fome moment of real danger, but ggerated and factitious alarm, give us alfo, a tennial Houfe of commons, and hereditary rulers? ot only a Presideut and senate, but all their falies, would have a clear and ftrong interest to inee them to the measure. The house of represen-ives would have fome perfonal intereft to prolong ir existence; and party paffions, factitious al-ns, and secret addresses to their local, personal family interests, might bring us to that, which e are told, that "Maskind have univerfally dif-vered and preferred,"—chance to a bad choice, and lers given by providence, rather than juch as we ht chufe ourfelous.

regard to the Miffifippi, or the fraternization of out citizens on the weltern waters, or any other plan that the Jacobin parties in the two countries suppose will tend to divide the people from the government. This I observe has been hinted by an individual in

If Mr. Adet's inftructions from the directory are as fet forth in his note, the recent change that has taken place in the mind of that body mult be ow-ing to fome plan and advice originating with, or at leaft approved of by a party in the United States. This man, without the fame paffionate talents, has impraved upon the plan laid down by Genet. As in the revolution, Great-Britain would not have perfitted in the war but for a party among ou felves, fo it is in the prefent cafe ; at the fame time it mult be allowed, that the French are at least on a footing with any other nation on earth, in the bufinels of intrigue.

If the Americans will fuffer themfelves to be menaced by the dictatorial and threatening file of the note, they can no longer be confidered in the eyes of the world as a free people. Although failhood and unmerited abufe will always fail of their inten-ded effect, it must wound the feelings of every real American who had any thing to do in favour of the late revolution, to be told by a foreign minifier, that we owe our independence, nay, our very exif. tence as a nation, to the people whom he reprefents. To the treaty they made with us in 1778, and to their armies who fought our battles ! A few words in answer to this will be sufficient. It mull be acknowledged by every fober and unprejudiced mind, that the people of France as fuch, had no more to do with making the treaty or fending an army to America, than the people of Chiua. It was done by the king, and his minifiers, without the advice, and believe I might fay without the knowledge of the people; and what was the object? To humble the pride and weaken the power of a nation, that was confidered a natural enemy. It is also well known that the French court delayed the ratification of the treaty until after they heard of the re-duction of Burgoyne's army; and before the French troops arrived in America, there was every profpect that the iffue of the war would be favourable. The fact is, the American people taught the French how to procure their liberty, and fincerely with they may have virtue enough to maintain it.

AN AMERICAN.

- FOR THE GAZZTTE OF THE UNITED STATES.

MR. FENNO,

The late unwarrantable usurpation of power by the executive of this commonwealth, has created confiderable degree of alarm among those citizens, who regard then legislature as the proper source or authority ; who regard their laws as facred, and who wifh to fee the executive, without favor or par-tiality, implicitly fubject to the letter of the law. The limitation contained in the law for the eleetion of electors of a Prefident and Vice-Prefident of the United States, is as explicit as words can concur in making it. It was to be expected that a governor of Pennfylvania might be able to afcer-tain, when twelve days after a fixed time would extail, when twelve days after a fixed time would ex-pire, without afking the opinion of the judiciary : It was to be fuppeded that the judiciary would be-fore they gave the opinion required, examine the law, which was within their reach, and not fuffer it to be faid of them, that a defigning fecretary had deceived them, in offering them the law deprived of its limitation.

But those who supposed that the laws of Pean-fylvania were a facred thing ; that they were equaly binding on the private citizen and the executive ; have been most cruelly deceived : they have feen their executive incapable of counti g twelve, refer the calculation to the judiciary in a most mutilated their executive incapable of counting twelve, refer the calculation to the judiciary in a most mutilated flate, and to crown the whole they have feen their iudiciary, without executive interfere i

A FEDERALIST.

For the Gazette of the United States.

Mr. FENNO,

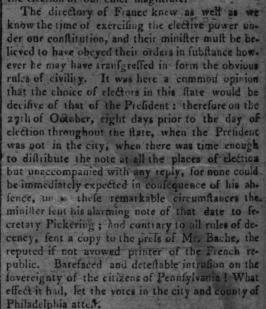

HAVE been reading the French minister (cien Adet's) sorte, as he calls it, to the Prefident, d believe his object to be as follows :-Finding mfelf recalled he takes the last and only opportuty of furnishing the enemies to peace and order this country, with what will be called an official ound of complaint against our happy govern-ent; and if the directory is about to take poffer o of Louisiana, which it is supposed has been ely ceded to France by the Spaniards; his note by be intended as a iultification for any new re-judiciary, without examining the law, pais judge ment on the mutilated extract thereof, fo prefented to them for purpoles at prefent unknown.

The law for regulating the election of electore, passed at the last fession of our legislature, appoints officers who fhall transmit the returns of the fame to the governor, " fo that the fame may be delivered within fourteen days after the faid election, and the governor shall enumerate and afcertain the number of votes given for each and every perfon, fo as aforefaid voted for, and shall thereupon declare by proclamation the names of the perfons duly elected and chosen, and shall cause a notification of their election to be delivered to the perfons to cholen, on or before the left Wedneiday in the faid month." The Pennfylvanian who acknowledges the fupreme authority of the legislature, finds no equivocal, no dubious point in this passage of the law : be needs not tua to his neighbor for an opinion on it. That law does not exitt which is more explicit in mentioning the duty of the executive.

Put our governor (whether of his own prope motion, or biaffed, as fome pretend to fay he is, b one who is called the governor's governor) fee " Anadows, clouds and darkueis" retting upon it and he alone, of all men, cannot fee clearly through

It is alterwards discovered, that though Pennfylvania fiould be obtained, yet, that a difappoint-ment might happen; and therefore the minifer, exercifing his diferction of fufpending himfelf when-ever he pleafed, on the 15th inflant, while the elec-tors are revolving in their own minds the choice to be made, anneunces a fuspension of his ministerial functions; but to be reassured, "whenever the gov-crument of the United States returns to Jentiments and to measures more corformable to the instreft of the alit-ance," of which it is understood the alone is to. judge. In this address to the people of the Uni-ted States, for it can be called nothing elfe, an addrefs not to their understanding, but to their pal-siderefs not to their understanding, but to their pal-tions, an addrefs not lefs replete with involve than with error, the minister is to indecome as to di-join the people from their government, and audacioul-ly furmions the former to a change of the latter; promiting, in this event, that Frenchmen fhall be found "taithful friends and generous allies." and this libellous inffrument he is not afhamed to furnifu to his printer. How little is the temper of my fellow-citizens known, and how foon has the fate of Genet, and his impudent measures, been forget ! How, too, has he miftaken our electors ! They are sirizens, not to be frightened or leduzed to betray their ocon country, by conforming to the will and pleafure of any nation, however terrible to its enamics, or generous to its allies; they know, the

We will fay nothing of his having pledged hi honor, that he would declare the refult of the election at the expiration of the limitation contained in he law. Little is the honor of the man to be rearded ; little is the confidence to be placed in him, who, appointed by the people the head of the com-monwealth, and whofe duty it is to fee the laws thereof faithfully administered, feeks the most pitiful fubterfuge to evade doing his duty, when the execution would tend to the diffeomtting the views of a party.

We will fay nothing of his having fent expresses, (at whole charge we know not) to haften the re-turns, which were expected to be on the road. We will only fay, that it is our firm opinion that by the most facred oath the governor of Pennfylvania was, and is bound to fee the laws faithfully administered without favor or affection.

We boaft of a conflictution that carefully draw the line between the executive, judiciary and legif-lative departments. A flately fabric, goodly to look upon, and which we may be allowed to thick ly ceded to France by the Spaniards; his note highly of. In proportion to the justice of our ef-be intended as a justification for any new re ations which they may attempt to impofe with tempt made by any of those powers to cross the di-
