Our municipality has imposed on the city of Venice, and the neighbouring district of Dogado, a contribution of 2,500,000 ducats, payable in ten months; and those who shall delay their payments eight days after that time, shall pay ten per cent. more; and this decree is to be executed in a military manner.

A part of the inhabitants of Spalario having testified a desire of establishing a republican constitution, they were attacked by another party of the inhabitants, who were of a different opinion.

Letters from Lucca state, that the government of that little republic is dissolved. A detachment of French troops from Leghorn took possession of the territory of Lucca on the 4th instant.

A great revolutionary spirit has shewn itself in this country. Since the Valteline has seen the Milanese free themselves from the domination of Austria, a great fermentation has reigned in the country.

2d. That the cardinals of the Roman catholic church out of Italy, shall have an active and passive voice, and may aspire as well as Italians, to the papal dignity.

5th. That the Spanish bishops shall be authorized to confer benefices, and to grant dispensations of marriage, without having recourse to the Holy Father.

INSBRUCK, July 5.

We are generally persuaded here, that Mantua will be restored to the emperor. Some letters even go to the length of stating that the Austrian troops are already in possession of it.

RATISBON, July 12.

There is in circulation a printed copy of the deliberations of the college of electors, relative to the proceedings and innovations made by the court of Berlin in Franconia.

One of these from the city.

The editors of a certain servile tool of faction, to the southward, absurdly called a Centinel of Liberty, might render some service to the community by observing a real impartiality—instead of cloaking under a pretended one, their malignant insults to the most illustrious citizens of America.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.

FROM ALBANY.—By an arrival from thence, at Beverly, in 36 days, we learn, that it was the opinion of Mr. Cardoqui, from the best information he could obtain, that the present negotiation between France and England would end in peace.

The peace is said to contain a great diversity of national character, and incidental song. The idea is novel—the occasion happy.

SALEM, September 12.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman in London dated June 30, 1797, to his friend in this town.

Some time since you expressed a desire to know what would be the decision of the board of commissioners in cases where the claimant had received, under the sentence of the lords commissioners of appeals, the amount of the sale or valuation made by the captors, but still claimed a further compensation from the government. I could not then answer decisively, because the board had not determined on any case thus circumstanced; since, it has; and I enclose you the report, by which you will see what was the decision and the effect of it, in the case of the Bacchus. I also enclose you a copy from the minutes of cases determined, and the amount; payable to-morrow by the British government.

N. B. The Bacchus was captured and condemned in the West Indies, with sugar and coffee, bound to Baltimore; and the commissioners have allowed upwards of 4000l (sterling, with interest, to the owners, over and above the sentence of the lords of appeals, for charges, and the difference of the value of the goods had they sold for at the place of condemnation.

We are happy to see, in the list of cases determined, that ample allowance is made to our townsman Capt. Benj. West, for damages, as well as to many other American citizens.

WALPOLE, (N. H.) September 4.

INCIDENTS ABROAD.

Reports of general peace begin to assume official importance. The emperor of Germany has communicated to the Diet of Ratisbon the conclusion of the pacific preliminaries between his empire and France, and gives assurance of a speedy and general peace. Lord Malmesbury has been introduced to the French legation at Lifle. The present politicians contrast this interview with that between this ambassador and the punctilious De Laeroix, and augur immediate and general peace. What will be the consequences of peace to the powers of Europe and the United States, is an important query. Let us conjecture a little. France will soon be a prey to intestine faction and war. Why? Because her present government derives its surest support from her military force, which has not only conquered its foreign, but awed its domestic enemies; but when those are disbanded, and that hobby of philosophy, with its cap and bells of liberty, called a constitution, is left to operate without extraneous aid, ambitious men will endeavour to overturn it; bad men will cabal; mad men will assassinate; philosophers will blow new constitutional air bubbles, and weak men will catch at them as they successively burst; while the mechanic, the merchant, and the husbandman, the honest and unambitious, may again find in the regal diadem the crown of their glory, security and happiness. England may perhaps change its minister. Infamy may occasion a regency; or death advance a new king. Her OUTS may be INS, and her ins may become outs. Her patriots may yell for liberty; and her jacobins, cry reform. Even her funds may fail; but whilst London is the mart, England will be the mistress of nations. No nation can rival her in the foreign market; and peace will open the ports of the world to her merchants. In war, the United States have suffered from the jealousy of those rival nations. That of the latter has produced unkindness; that of the former, insult and cruel injury. In peace the scene will change, and Britain, and France, if the assumes any pretensions to commerce will court our custom with fervour.

NORFOLK, September 9.

A sloop arrived yesterday from Rhode Island and has brought us the melancholy news of the death of the truly worthy and much respected Major WILLIAM LINDSAY, Collector of the Customs for the district; he departed this life at Newport, on the 3d instant. As soon as the account arrived here all the shipping in the harbour hoisted their colours half mast, as a tribute of respect to so worthy a character.
