Foreign Intelligence.

LONDON.
While we justly extol our late naval victories as the most brilliant in point of NA-TIONAL GLORY, we ought to view them as substantially conferring NATIONAL SAFETY.
Possessed, as we now are, of the empire of every navigable sea—commanding the commerce of the world—the naval power of the enemy so crippled that its wretched remains can creep out only by stealth—we have every advantage to expect, and nothing to fear.
The phantom of Invasion no longer able even to disturb timid or weak minds, every individual throughout the kingdom, whether Land Proprietor, Merchant, Manufacturer, Trader, &c. &c. proudly feels that solid security is established on the most firm base, by the irretrievable prowess of our arms.

But their whole property is more immediately benefited by our late decisive victories, are the Holders of Stock; as the Funds, so liable to depression from the very shadow of danger, may now be considered, in point of substantial security, fully equal to that of landed property. It must seem strange, then, to the bulk of the public, why the Funds have not experienced an elevation commensurate with an increase of national safety; more especially as there is now so great and rapid a demand for Stock wherewith to redeem the Land Tax. To all, however, conversant with the proceedings of the Alley, it can be no matter of surprize.

The fact is, that the still depression of the Funds is the mere creature of artifice. This is effected by Specious Sales, Time-bargains; but chiefly by borrowing immense quantities of Stocks from Bankers, and pressing them on the Markets for sale. These matters are ostensibly transacted by Brokers; but their Principals are egregiously deceived in thinking they remain concealed under this cloak.
Every man of importance is fully known in the Alley by his Representative the Broker.

It is in vain the directory employs every revolutionary means to conceal from foreign countries the impression which the glorious victory obtained by Lord Nelson has made throughout France. The very means used to conceal it betrays the magnitude of that impression. On this occasion its iron sceptre has principally fallen on Journalists and on the liberty of the press; yet the anti-directorial spirit re-appears continually under variegated forms, in spite of the incessant attacks of the directory party.

The Propagator was suppressed for having published ship news, the truth of which proved offensive to the five tyrants; but it has appeared again under another title; the Nouvelles de Paris, also prohibited, for some ingenious allusions to the directorial despotism, was published the very next day after its prohibition, under the title of Cour-rier of Paris, without the least alteration of the spirit in which it is written. The Journal des Francs, which the inviolability of the representatives of the people, Marycey and Quodon, could not protect from the directorial doom, is continued under the title of Correspondence des Représentans Steveniotte, Delfaix, and Dethier, and it still breathes the spirit of its ancient authors, Antonelle and Garnier de Saintes, who, previous to the revolution of the 11th Fructidor, conducted it under the title of Journal des Hommes Libres.

By these Journals, as well as by private letters, and the arrival of persons from France, we learn that an universal discontent prevails throughout the Republic, not more on account of the wild expedition against Egypt, which has proved a death-blow to the French Navy, than from the order for a new levy of 200,000 men, and an extraordinary expence of 125,000,000 livres Tournois. These two measures cannot fail to produce universal discontent in a country drained both of men and money; and it is a certain fact, that this discontent has already broken out in very serious commotions, especially at Brussels and Ghent, where numbers of labouring people have demanded pas-ports to withdraw into other countries, and where the gen d'Armerie is constantly on duty, to prevent and suppress riots and insurrections.

November 9.
It was generally expected that the late destruction of the French Squadrons off the coasts of Egypt and Ireland, would produce a violent explosion in the interior of France, against the present rulers; or that the latter, to prevent this explosion, would break off the negotiations at Rastadt, and make a sudden irruption both into Germany and Italy, to weaken, by some important success on the Continent, the impression naturally produced by their late misfortunes at sea.

That no explosion has taken place in the interior, is to be ascribed to a want of energy on the part of the malcontents, who have no rallying point to go to, or any foreign support to depend on. The French government has not broken off the negotiations at Rastadt, probably from a dread lest some dilatory occurrence on the Continent should complete its own disrepute, and drive its enemies to despair. It is conspicious, that the public opinion, to which it is in a great measure indebted for its success, especially in Italy, is now turned against it, in consequence of the numberless vexations imposed on the people, whose hopes have been cruelly dashed, and who, instead of being delivered from oppression, have become the victims of the most shameful perfidy. The Directory is fearful lest the smallest check should produce a renewal of the Sicilian Vespers; and this fear must have been increased by the enthusiastic joy displayed by all the powers on the Continent, on the occasion of the late victory obtained by Lord Nelson.

October 22.
The plan for the redemption of the Land Tax begins now to operate very perceptibly.
Several considerable purchases have been made within these few days. This circumstance, added to the general favorable aspect of foreign affairs, has raised the funds. The Consols were yesterday done at 53, and Or-anian at 22 per cent premium.

Among other undertakings of public economy which at present direct the attention of Mr. Pitt, it is proposed to simplify the receipts of the customs, by bonding all goods imported; which will not only economize the expence of collection, but considerably diminish the amount of commercial capital required to carry on trade. At present the collection of the customs is after the rate of 6l. 7s. 5d. per centum, while the collection of the Excise is after the rate only of 4l. 8s.
10d. per centum; so it was for 1797.

The gross receipt of Cuftoms in 1797, was 16,339,848 19 6d And yet the net produce was only 5,014,468 14 11d

Above thirteen hundred thousand pounds being paid back in drawbacks and allowances, which have the double evil of increasing the expence of collection, and unnecessarily demanding an increase of capital in the merchant. Whereas, if all goods imported were allowed to be warehoused and bonded until they were wanted, we should add to the temptation of making England the emporium of the world.

The Play of Lovers Vows, loses none of its attractions by repetition. The house was on Monday night crowded. In the Epilogue Munden, the poetical butler of the night, after his whimsical defence and praise of rhyme, and his concluding reference to Lord Nelson's victory.

Glorious news,
Nine ships of the line—just a ship for each Mile, added, with an equally happy allusion to a more recent victory,

As I live, there's an end of the French and their navy, Sir John Warren has sent the Brest fleet to old Dary I So says the Gazette—which as ev'ry one knows, Speaks nothing but truth, tho' its written in prose I

It is almost unnecessary to say, that the Theatre refounded with applause.

Madame Neckar compares an eminent situation in life to the fabled Proteus; it is a God before you approach it; a Tiger or a Serpent while you hold it; and again a God when you let it escape it from you.—This thought very naturally arose in an observing mind, that has so forcibly felt and fatally experienced the capricious and changeful nature of worldly grandeur and prosperity.
