One Hundred Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the subscribers, living in Somerset county, state of Maryland, on the 24th of December last, two Negro Men; George and Randel—George is about six feet high, twenty-two years of age, and of a yellow complexion—had on when he went away a dark cloth coat, kersey breeches and white yarn stockings; he is a pretty good player on the fiddle.—Randel is about five feet two inches high, twenty years of age, and of a yellow complexion, has a loud hoarse voice, and is a good deal bow-legged; he pretends to be something of a cobbler;—had on when he went away, a fullian coat, home-made kersey breeches and white yarn stockings. There is no doubt, but they will change their clothes as well as their names—they having been taken up on the 29th of December last at Dock-creek, in the state of Delaware, and committed by John Cole, Esq.
(by the names of Stephen and Charles) to the care of John M'Wherts and Thomas Kerker, from whom they made their escape.—Whoever apprehends the above negroes, and who has secured in jail, so that the subscribers may get them again, shall receive the above reward, or fifty dollars for either.

The Subscriber offers for Sale,

THE FOLLOWING PROPERTY.

AN Excellent three story Brick House, situate the corner of 7th and Race-streets;— the house is about 25 feet front and well finished in every respect; the lot is 76 feet front on Race-street and 88 feet deep; the situation remarkably airy, having a public square open in front of it.

Two three story Brick Houses, Brick Stores, and good Wharf, situate in Water-street, between Arch and Race-streets, the lot on which these buildings are, is fifty four feet front on Water-street, and continues that width about 95 feet, then widens to the south 13 feet 6 inches, so that the front on the water is fifty seven feet six inches; this lot adjoins John Steinmetz sq. on the south, and has the advantage of a public alley on the north, and is a very desirable situation for the business of a Flour Factor, or Merchant.

A large elegant two story Stone House, situate on the Point no Point road, being the first house to the Northward of the five mile stone; this house is about 60 feet front and 40 feet deep

PHILADELPHIA.

TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 2.

Extract from 'A Journal of the Occurrences at the Temple during the Confinement of Louis XVI. late King of France, by M.
Clery, the King's valet-de-chambre.'

On the 7th of October, at six o'clock at night, I was summoned to the Council Chamber, where I found a score of municipal officers with Manuel as president, who, from being solicitor to the Commune, was become a member of the National Convention: the fight of him surprised and alarmed me. I was directed to remove, that very night, the Orders still worn by the king, such as those of St. Louis and the Golden Fleece: His majesty no longer wore that of the Holy Ghost, which had been suppressed by the first assembly.

I represented that I could not do it, and that it was not my part to make the decrees of the Council known to the king. I hoped by this to gain time to break it to his majesty, and I perceived besides, by their embarassment, that they were then acting without the authority of any decree either of the Convention or the Commune. The commissioners were unwilling to go up to the king, till Manuel determined them by offering to go with them. The king was fitting, and engaged in reading. Manuel spoke first, and the conversation which followed was as remarkable for the indecent familiarity of the deputy, as for the temper and serenity of the monarch.

"How do you find yourself?" said Manuel; "have you every thing you want?"
"I content myself with what I have," replied his majesty. "No doubt you have heard of the victories gained by our armies, of the taking of Spire, of Nice, and of the conquest of Savoy?" "I heard it mentioned some days ago, by one of those gentlemen, who was reading the Evening Journals." "What! don't you get the Journals, that are become so interesting?" "I never receive any of them." "Oh! Sirs," said Manuel, turning to the municipal officers, and pointing to the king, "you must let the gentlemen have the Journals; it is right he should be informed of our success." Then, again addressing his majesty: "Democratic principles are spreading; you know that the people have abolished Royalty, and adopted the republican form of government."
"I have heard it, and I pray to God that the French people may be as happy as I have always wished to make them."
"You too know that the National Assembly have suppressed all Orders of Chivalry: you ought to have been told to leave off the ornaments of them: returned to the class of other citizens, you must expect to be treated like others; with this exception, ask for whatever you want, it shall be immediately procured for you." "I thank you," said the king, "I want nothing." His majesty here returned to his book; and Manuel, who had been endeavoring to discover vexation, or provoke impatience in him, had the mortification of finding only a noble resignation, and an unalterable composure.

The deputation now withdrew, and one of the officers desired me to follow him to the Council Chamber, where I was again ordered to take the ornaments from the king's person. Manuel added: "You will do well to send the crosses and ribbons to the Convention." "I must also inform you," continued he "that Louis's confinement may last a long while, and that if it be not your intention to remain here, it will be better that this opportunity of declaring it. It is also in contemplation in order to render the su-perintendance more easy, to decrease the number of people employed in the Tower: if you stay with the late king, you will entirely be left by yourself, and you must expect hard work: wood and water will be brought you once a week, but it will be your business to clean the rooms, and do the rest of the work." I replied, that being determined never to forsake my master, I would submit to every thing. I was conducted back to his majesty's chamber, who said to me:— "You heard what passed with those gentlemen—I would have you to night take off the orders from your coats."

The next morning, when I was dressing the king, I told him that I had locked up the crosses and ribbons, although Manuel had given me to understand that it would be proper to send them to the Convention.—
"You have done right," replied his majesty.
It has been reported that Manuel came to the Temple, in the month of September, to prevail upon his majesty to write to the king of Prussia, at the time he marched his army to Champagne. I can testify that Manuel came but twice to the Temple while I was there, first, on the third of September, then on the seventh of October; that each time he was accompanied by a great number of municipal officers, and that he never had any private conversation with the King.

He once read in one of those papers, the petition of an engineer for the head of the tyrant Louis XVI, that he might load his piece with it, and shoot it at the enemy.— Another journal, speaking of Madame Elizabeth, and endeavoring to destroy the admiration she had excited in the public, by the noble manner in which she had devoted herself to the King and Queen, asserted that virtuous Princesses to have had a child by a Bishop, adding, that this young wretch ought to be smothered, with the two others in the Tower, meaning the Dauphin and Madame Royal.

These articles affected the King only for the sake of the people. "How very unfortunate are the French," said he, "to suffer themselves to be imposed upon in this manner." "If I saw these journals first, I took care to remove them out of his majesty's way; but they were frequently carried when I was employed elsewhere, so that very few of the articles written for the purpose of abusing the royal family, whether to excite the populace to regicide, or to prepare the minds of the people to suffer its being perpetuated, but what were read by the King. They only who remember the insolent writings that were published at that time can have an idea of this kind of unprecedented torture.

The influence of these fanguinary writings was also observable in the conduct of such of the municipal officers as had not before thrown themselves to hard hearted or distrustful as others.

One day after dinner, having just written an account of expenses in the Council Chamber, and locked it up in a desk of which they had given me the key; my back was scarcely turned, when Marinot a municipal officer said to his colleagues, though he was not on duty, that they ought to open the desk, and examine its contents, to ascertain whether or not I had a correspondence with the enemies of the people. "I know him well," added he, "and am sure he receives letters for the king." Then accusing his colleagues of remissness, abused them violently, threatened to impeach them all before the commune as accomplices, and went out to put his threat into execution. A minute was immediately drawn up of all the papers in the desk, and sent to the Commune, where Marinot had already laid his information.

Another day, on seeing a draft board, (damier), which, with the permission of his colleagues, I had sent to be mended, brought back, he pretended it might contain a correspondence, had it entirely taken to pieces, and, when he found nothing, made the workmen paste it together again before him.

Once my wife and her friend coming to the Tower as usual on the Thursday, I was speaking with them in the Council Chamber when the Queen and Madame Elisabeth, who were walking, saw us, and nodded to us.
This notice of mere affability, was observed by Marinot, and it was ground enough for him to have my wife and her friend arrested as they were going out of the Council Chamber. They were examined separately: my wife being asked who the lady was that accompanied her, declared she was her sister; while to the same question the other had replied that they were cousins. This contradiction furnished subject for a long written statement, and the most serious suspicions; Marinot pretending that this lady was one of the Queen's Pages in disguise. However, after a most painful and insulting examination, that lasted three hours, they were set at liberty.

They were still permitted to come to the Tower: but we redoubled our caution. I had often in those short interviews managed to slip into their hands notes written with a pencil, which had escaped the searches of the Municipal Officers, and which I concealed with great care. These notes related to some information their Majesties wished to have: luckily on that day they had not received any; if one had been found upon them, we should all three have been in the greatest danger.

There were others of the Municipal Officers who had the most extravagant whims.
One ordered some macaroons to be broken to see if there was no letter concealed in them. Another, on the same pretence, had some peaches cut before him, and the stones cracked: A third, one day compelled me to drink the essence of soap prepared for shaving the King, affecting to apprehend it was poison. After dinner and supper, Madame Elisabeth used to give me a gold-bladed knife to clean, which the Municipal Officer would often snatch out of my hand, to examine if I had not slipped some paper into the sheath.

Madame Elisabeth having commanded me to send a book of devotion to the Dutchess de Sereus, the Municipal Officers cut off the margins, for fear any thing should have been written upon them with a secret ink.

One of them one day forbade my going up to the Queen to dress her hair: Her Majesty was to come down to the King's apartments, and to bring her powder and combs herself.

Another would follow her into Madame Elizabets's chamber to see her change her cloaths, which she usually did at noon: I represented to him the indecency of such behaviour, but he persisted, and her Majesty was obliged to give up dressing, and leave the room.

When the linen was brought from the wash, the Officers made me unfold article by article, and examined it always by daylight. The washerwoman's book, and every paper used for packing, were held to the fire, to ascertain whether there were not any secret writing upon them. The linen, after having been worn by the King, Queen, Prince, and Princesses, was in like manner examined before it was given out.

There were, however, some of the Municipal Officers who were not so hardened as their colleagues: but most of these becoming suspected by the Committee of Public Safety have fallen victims to their humanity, and those who are still alive have been long groaning in confinement.

A young man called Taulan, whom by his manner of speaking, I thought to be one of the greatest enemies of the Royal Family, came up to me one day, and pressing my hand, said with an air of mystery —"I can't speak to the Queen to-day, on account of my comrades; let her know that I have executed her commission, that in a few days I shall be on duty, and that "I will then bring her an answer."—Amazed on hearing him speak thus, and fearing that he was laying a snare for me, I answered, that he was mistaken in addressing himself to me on such errands. "No, I am not mistaken," replied he, pressing my hand with still more warmth, and retiring. On my informing the Queen of this conversation, she told me I might trust Taulan. This young man was afterwards involved on her Majesty's trial, with nine other Municipal Officers, accused of having agreed to favour her escape at the time she was at the Tower, and she was put to death.
