The History of Pennsylvania,
By ROBERT PROUD,
In two Quarto volumes.
A work entirely new, original, and highly interesting; embellished with a Portrait of the head of WILLIAM PENN. and a new Map of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, Maryland, and the State of Delaware, and parts adjacent.
IN this publication are exhibited the remarkable rise, happy progress, and extraordinary prosperity of that province, till near the time of the declared independence of the United States of America; effected by such uncommon and pacific means such singular, just and prudent policy, as appear nowhere in the history of nations, to have so generally, and so extensively prevailed, in any other country, to an equal degree of advancement, importance, and felicity of the people, and so generally to have excited the admiration of all observers, as in the flourishing and happy state of the province of Pennsylvania—proper to be known and remembered by all those, who wish to be informed in the extraordinary melioration of this country, and in the means of rendering the inhabitants to happy and prosperous in former times; as well as an egregious example for posterity and surrounding States to imitate and improve upon, &c.

PHILADELPHIA,
MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 15.

MR. FENNO,
IT is with reluctance that I find myself compelled to appear again before the public—but the liberality of Major Jackson's publications of the 10th inst. obliges me to say a few words—not that I intend to pursue him through all his "positive and negative assertions" or his "algebraical" nonsense. It would be too absurd, and trifling with the patience of the citizens. Upon the first perusal of his piece, I did intend answering him very fully; but upon a more careful examination, I find all the testimony he has brought forward does not prove that I ever told him captain Jones had the Yellow Fever when I visited the ship Thomas Wilson,—so that we are upon the same ground on which we parted. In order to shew my real opinion of the situation of the said ship, her crew and passengers, I herewith subjoin the report made immediately to the Board of Health, together with the certificates of some gentlemen, who questioned me very pointedly, in order to know whether there were any persons affected with the Yellow Fever on board the ship.
We have this day visited and examined the ship Thomas Wilson, captain Thomas A. Jones, last from Kingston, Jamaica, and find all the people on board in perfect health, except the captain, who says he had been sick in the West Indies in October last, from which he recovered, and was again taken sick soon after he left Jamaica on his passage home. He is not much indisposed at present, and is attending his duty on deck, but has his throat bound up in consequence of the operation of Mercury, which he has been using—his complaint does not appear to us to be what is commonly called the Yellow Fever, or any disease of a malignant contagious nature.
Four of his people died at Petit Guave and Kingston, the last of whom about the middle of October last, all of whose bedding and clothing was thrown overboard.
The ship, though rather dirty, does not exhibit any such stench as would be likely in our opinion to produce a contagious disease.
Upon the whole, notwithstanding, we could not pronounce her to be a sickly vessel, or that there was reason to apprehend any contagion existing on board, yet from prudential motives and to prevent alarm, we thought it proper to direct her to be moved down opposite to the marine hospital, and there to await the directions of the Board of Health.

Resident Physician of the port.

WILLIAM ALLEN,
Health Officer of the port.
Philadelphia, March 23, 1799. Copy.
To the Board of Managers. }
I do hereby certify, that two or three days after the arrival of the ship Thomas Wilson, Thomas Jones, captain, in the Delaware opposite the city, I enquired of Doctor James Hall, whether it was true (as was then reported by many persons) that there were several persons affected with the Yellow Fever on board of the said ship; and that Dr. Hall assured me, there were not, and that there had been no such sickness in the vessel since the month of October last. I believe (but of this I cannot be certain) that Doctor Hall said the captain of the vessel was still unwell of a fever which he had contracted in the West Indies. I am persuaded, however, that the Doctor asserted, in the most decided and unequivocal manner, that there was no malignant fever, of any kind, on board the vessel, and he even requested me to make use of his name in saying so.
BENJAMIN SMITH BARTON,
Philadelphia, April 12th, 1799.

Philadelphia, April 11th 1799.
I do certify and declare that sitting one evening in the latter end of March last, with several gentlemen in the Land Office, Dr. James Hall entered and after the usual salutations, he was asked several questions relative to a vessel which had arrived on that or the preceding day, from Jamaica. I do not at present, particularly recollect those questions, except the following. "Dr. is it true that the crew of that vessel are afflicted with the Yellow Fever?" to which he answered—no—but he was informed that four men had died on the outward passage, two at Petit Guave and two Kingston—that the capt. had been sick of a fever whilst abroad, where he had had a considerable quantity of Mercury and had been very incautious while under the operation, of medicine for he had caught cold and had a slight fever, but was able to walk about. The Dr. added that as the captain was sick and the vessel very dirty, he had ordered the captain to proceed with her down the river, where she should perform Quarantine.
PETER BAYNTON.
April 11th, 1799.
Having always felt pain and reluctance at the introduction of my name into a public print, yet ever willing when called upon to make as accurate a statement of any conversation that might have passed in my presence as my recollection will admit, I do therefore certify, at the request of Doctor James Hall, as follows, viz.
That on the day the ship Thomas Wilson was ordered down the river, I was sitting in company with several gentlemen in the Land Office, at which time Doctor Hall entered the room—the Doctor having been asked several questions respecting the said ship, replied that from the information he had received, four men had died on board the said ship, that the captain had been sick of a

West India or Jamaica fever, I cannot recollect which, and having incautiously used mercury had caught a cold and was now sick of a slight fever, that the captain had been on shore with some of the crew or passengers—that the vessel being extremely dirty and having come from a sickly island, he (the Doctor) thought it prudent and proper, and had ordered the captain with the others on board, and had also ordered the vessel to proceed down the river, and that he had just left the wharf, having first seen the ship turn the point on her way down.
FRANCIS JOHNSTON.

After a perusal of the above, I think no person can suppose that I would seriously and deliberately assert as a fact that the captain had the yellow fever. However improper it might be to pass a joke—on so serious a subject—I own that what I said to Mr. Kepple was only in jest—and he left me to abruptly that I could not have an explanation with him. I informed Major Jackson personally before I came forward in the papers, of what passed between Mr. Kepple and myself in the Chestnut street, and likewise added, that my intentions were to alarm him a little in order to spur him on in getting the health law passed; knowing him to be an active member of the Legislature, as I conceived it highly improper for vessels to come up to the city until they were examined, on board of whom any persons had been sick or had died—but unfortunately there was no law to prevent it—which was contemplated in the law then before the House.
JAMES HALL.
April 12.

That Algebra, or any other science, should appear nonsense to Doctor Hall, may readily be believed—that a rule of DEMONSTRATION (after what has passed) should seem peculiarly so to him can excite no surprise.
He has my pity—could any thing, he has said or written, have injured me, for one moment, in the estimation of a single person, I would add my forgiveness.
W. JACKSON.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6, 1799.
GENTLEMEN,
A NUMBER of your fellow-citizens, now in Philadelphia, from different parts of the State, impressed with the importance of the approaching Election of Governor, have assembled at several times in order to ascertain what person, qualified for that office, would be generally acceptable.
From a perusal that the general sentiments of the friends of the constitution, laws and government of our country had been, for some time, directed to JAMES ROSS, of Pittsburgh, a committee of Gentlemen from twenty one counties were appointed to wait on him, and had the pleasure to report to the meeting his consent to serve, if elected.
Committees have, therefore, been nominated in every county for the purpose of promoting the election of a Man whose talents, integrity and public conduct must endear him to his country, and afford the fairest prospect of a just, impartial and decisive administration.
Persuaded that these measures will meet with your concurrence you are requested, together with such gentlemen as you may associate with yourselves, as the committee of the county to use your utmost exertions, with the friends of order and good government, to support, by their votes and influence, the Man of their choice. For this purpose it is recommended, that committees be formed, without delay, in each township or district in your county, with whom you will correspond, and that you likewise correspond with the committee for the city of Philadelphia, and with such of the committees for the counties as you may judge expedient. We enclose you lists of the members composing them; and take the liberty of suggesting, that care will be necessary, in writing or printing your tickets, to mention Mr. Ross's place of residence; and, in directing the letters, you may think it necessary to write to any of the other committees, to the person first named on such committees.
On an occasion so interesting, and at a period so critical, we think it our duty to remind you, that the happiness and tranquility of the state, and we might perhaps add, of the Union, eminently depend on the selection of a suitable person to fill the Chief Executive Office of Pennsylvania.—That we have, as Citizens, a solemn duty to perform in making the choice, and an obligation, no less, to support it when made.—That supineness and indifference are as much to be deprecated as prejudice and error, and that to relax in any possible exertion in your county may frustrate the labors of every other part of the state.

Samuel Postlethwaite, Chairman.
Benjamin R. Morgan, Secretary.
