IN this publication are exhibited the remarkable rise, happy progress, and extraordinary prosperity of that province, till near the time of the declared independency of the United States of America; effected by such uncommon and pacific means such singular, just and prudent policy, as appear nowhere in the history of nations, to have so generally, and so extensively prevailed, in any other country, to an equal degree of advancement, importance, and felicity of the people, and to generally have excited the admiration of all observers, as in the flourishing and happy state of the province of Pennsylvania—proper to be known and remembered by all those, who wish to be informed in the extraordinary melioration of this country, and in the means of rendering the inhabitants to happy and prosperous in former time; as well as an egregious example for posterity and surrounding states to imitate and improve upon, &c.

The Gazette.

PHILADELPHIA

MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 29.

From the New York Gazette and General Advertiser.

The Anti-Revolutionist, No. 11.

To the Federalists of New York.

BRETHREN AND FRIENDS,

In the New York Gazette of Tuesday last, I presumed to address you some observations, intended to invite your thoughts and exertions to the ensuing elections—I asserted that a French Revolution is beginning in this country; and I illustrated the position, not by new facts or arguments, for none are necessary. The proofs are every where—they stare you in the face every moment. The State governments—the presses—and all the sources of public information, are rapidly passing into the hands of Frenchmen—and yet it is said, you will allow this city to be represented by the most virulent and incurable of Jacobins.

It was my intention, however, to have proceeded more minutely into proofs of the progress of the Revolutionary system in this State—but, as the election comes on before either the acts of the Legislature or the journals of the house can be procured, I am not able to recur with much accuracy to the proceedings of last winter.

The late house enjoyed, till near its decease, the reputation of being FEDERAL—but, sense may be requisite, as well as honesty and Federalism—and, in the hands of such a man as Mr. Burr, DUFES are more dangerous instruments than KNAVES—Men of only a little discernment, saw that Mr. Burr, so often a candidate for the first magistracy of this state, and for the first or second in the union, did not quit those high pretensions for the mere usual employments of state legislation—that is, to alter the election law—grant some lotteries—and regulate the packing of Beef, &c.—Those who knew the wonderful versatility of his talents and his immeasurable ambition, understood that the politics of the state were to be changed from the foundation—but, to effect this, his agency must be concealed from the public view—He made no parade of influence. The master magician remained behind the curtain, and seemed to be ignorant of the Springs that moved the puppets—If he ever came forward in his strength, he appeared like the Lyon among the beasts—ruling calmly, by a nod or a jesture—or simply intimating his wishes by his jackall Provoit.

But the effects of his presence are soon apparent.—The Virginia and Kentucky Resolutions were brought forward—each of them a wicked and insolent declaration of war upon the United States.—It was discovered, however, at Albany, that the Virginians had much reason on their side—and that the Kentuckians, in the honest love of Liberty, had gone a LITTLE TOO FAR.—Another transaction was still more disgraceful.—When the Massachusetts Resolutions were called up, it was thought that no American would oppose a measure calculated to emancipate this country from the dominion and influence of foreigners—still less was it thought that this measure, being a general one, could be objected to by the very persons who have clamoured so loudly against British influence.—Mr. Burr rose, and in a short speech proved, that "at fewer treasons have been committed against this country by foreigners, than by natives."

Mr. King, from the western district, made a single and meritorious effort to oppose the current; but the house were convinced.—it was decided that we ought to import Legislators from France and Ireland—I consider these resolutions as being a trial of strength between our own country and foreign influence—and, as far as the event goes, it proves us to be the weakest.—We are exposed without defence, to the intrigues and the corruptions of every nation that may think she can profit by our distractions.—With insurrections among the foreigners who are settled in the interior country;—with United Irishmen among those of the towns.—With Democratic Societies and opposition papers, under the direction of Frenchmen.—With Gallatin, Genet, Fidelity, Dallas, and Lyon to rule us, and with the hopeful set of young politicians whom the Directory are educating among us for our future Legislators, we must not be surprisid if we one day experience the convulsions and horrors so often repeated in France, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and Egypt.

In every country where Jacobins have existed, a principal means of their success has been to excite jealousies and discontents, and spread misrepresentations in the petty districts where they have influence. By these means, and by promising to relieve the people from pretended oppressions, many a man is elected in this country from a SMALL DISTRICT, who would never acquire respectability enough to be elected by a large number of his fellow citizens. On this difference turns the whole theory and practice of distorting states for elections. It is always a Jacobin operation, and on that account, a proposal was made last winter to divide the state with as many districts as there are Senators to be chosen. The firmness and wisdom of our Senate have, on many occasions prevented the adoption of the most improper measures: they must be radically Jacobinized, and this will be done the first opportunity that occurs, by causing each Senator to be elected from his own local district.

The next step was to reduce the salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court. Perhaps no state in the Union ever possessed a more able and respectable bench than this. It happens, however, that the two Anti-Federal Judges are men of fortune, and the three others being less so, it has been thought practicable to starve them from their seats: This attack would be carried farther. Nothing would tend more to unbind society and dissolve the bands of confidence and order, than to render the judiciary contemptible or corrupt. Nothing could better answer the purposes of a party than to fill it with such men as Peter W. Yates, and other favorites of the late Governor.

The session ended with an act about the River Bronx, which I shall take occasion to consider more fully hereafter.—In the mean time, I request your attention to the 11th page of the act as published by Mr. Furman.—Remember that your city is annually wasted by fires, which are remote from the water.—Ten years are granted in the first instance for bringing in the Bronx—and in the next section is seen what the public already believes to be the actual object of the Company—BANKING, and the EAST-INDIA TRADE. Ten fevers are to defoliate your city—ten times ten fires to destroy your house.—The Bronx is pre-occupied by this Company; and, under the pretence of removing a calamity which requires the infant and strenuous exertions of all friends to the city—under this pretence, some Capitalists are sporting with SCRIP, and a bankrupt politician repairing his fortune by "moined transactions and operations."

Fellow Citizens! You will pardon my warmth if, in the first fervor and bitterness of indignation, I utter myself in execration against the authors of this flagitious plot. The lives of thousands depend upon the police and supplies of this city.—Your trade and revenue in a great measure depend on it.—But the project is adjourned ten years; and in the mean time, Mr. Burr and a junta of Directors, of whom three quarters are anti-federalists, are pursuing an entirely different object, by a kind of POLITICO-COMMERCIAL-FINANCIAL-BRONX-OPERATION.

Fellow Citizens!

This is a dangerous man in any situation, but particularly so if elected with the herd of the same ticket. I rely, however, with confidence that the vast wealth, the great numbers, the respectability, and the important commercial interests of this city, will not again be misrepresented by any person from the lough of the Democratic Society.—Look at the respectable and confidential names composing the Federal Ticket; men of personal worth, reputable in their several professions; long known to you as good citizens, and undoubted friends to their country, and its independence. In such men you may fully confide. The sacrifices which many of them have made, deserve your thanks and support. I repeat it then—Let the merchant, the mechanic, the lawyer and the labourer.—Let the rich and the poor, and all classes unite, come forward and exert themselves—they have a common interest in the prosperity of the country.—Let them commit their public concerns to men of SENSE and HONESTY, and we shall soon see this city restored to its former respectability, and under a just and pure police and legislation, rapidly increasing in influence, commerce and opulence.

Boston, April 24.

A letter was received from Capt. Mackay, of the ship Galen of this place, dated London Feb. 22. He informs, that in 24 days after he left Boston, he was safe moored in the Thames; that he experienced blowing weather on his passage, and had an opportunity of proving the goodness of the ship; that he was pursued for 16 hours by a vessel (which finally proved to be a British frigate) when his men were all called to their quarters, and displayed the most commendable spirit, and that a convoy was appointed to sail on the 8th of March, which he should embrace to return for America.

LONDON, FEB. 17.

Nicholas Tomlinson, late commander of La Suffisante sloop, is struck off the list of captains for inattention while on board the Lord Hawke privateer, when he engaged a Spanish packet, in not answering the signal of La Nymph frigate when she appeared in sight.

When captain Peyton was introduced on Wednesday at the levee, the King said, "Captain Peyton, I am glad to see you on such an occasion;" and laying his right hand on the officer's shoulder, resumed, "I return you thanks for your services." His majesty after conferring the honor of knighthood on captain Thompson, congratulated him in the same manner.

A motion was made on Tuesday in the court of King's Bench, on the part of Earl Thanet and others, prosecuted for an attempt to rescue Arthur O'Connor at Maidstone, to have a trial at bar in Westminster, which was granted, and the 25th of April fixed upon as the day of trial.
