IN all countries, the proceedings in the commencement of their governments, are lost in darkmenes and obscurity, owing to a cardesanes, in the cucerding geners on, to preserve the public records, and the attraction of the nation, in those rude ages, heing called off from their domelic concerns, to engage in wars and conquest. Of what infinite value would the laws of Alfred be, had they been ranfamitted to say days? Time, that destroys every thing, enhances the value of well authorite tada public records, and renders them almost in estimable. It is hoped, that Americans will, therefore, chearfully constribute their affiltance in transmitting to posterity the Isbours of their ancestors—formmens of the Columbian value.
